"Grandpaw" Lloyd, "treasure-pot" Adam play in sand

. . . Never Live With Children?

(Lloyd "Bus" Stern, has written a loving, caring story which the Victoria Times wishes to share with its readers. Born in Chicago, Stern was a high jumper at university and published a novel, Star's Road, based on his experiences in college sports. Stern and his wife owned a Memphis furniture store, which he sold after her death in 1973. He wrote this for the Washington Post from his home in Brookline, Mass.)

By LLOYD STERN

"Never live with your children," my wife of 40 years cautioned. When she died, I lived alone for a few years in the same house. It was never the same house.

If it was lonely in the early days, the evenings were worse — like the Sundays I suffered when, as a salesman, I had to spend them in a hotel on the road. Walking along in the hall past the children's bedrooms, I'd peek in sadly. The beds were made up neatly, unused and silent. The phone my daughters were once constantly on was mute, constantly off.

From time to time friendly real estate people rang my bell at odd hours. I sprang to life. I listened to their condolences.

I wasn't ready for this empty living, and I wasn't ready to sell my home. Not just yet. Wait, my son-in-law advised me. My son suggested a trip to get over this period.

A few months went by. My children were wonderful, so caring. Time would burn up the past. I took a 10-day trip through Norway, alone. I found out half my problem was the language barrier. The other half, when I couldn't distinguish between Bergen and Oslo, was me.

When I went back home I leased my house for a year, then drove by myself to Chicago to visit a lifelong friend. His wife had been dead a few years; he was living alone and, from what I could gather, wanted it that way. He told me his adjustment and transition had been a problem, and I had an opportunity to discover his manner of living. As a lawyer, he just plunged into his work. He lived mostly for his work — simple for him.

After a month with him in Chicago I decided to visit my brother and his wife in Los Angeles.

They had pleaded: Come out to stay! The visit was short; they had a 16-year-old daughter and a huge family dog. I loved their child, the dog hated me back. So much for living with friends and relatives. I flew back home after a week.

Eventually I would have to face the fact that I was lost, rudderless. I just wanted to get away from my home where I had lived for 24 years. It was lonely and too full of memories of my wife.

I had a try living by myself in Memphis and decided my unhappiness was that I was lonesome for my children, family life and their daily contact.

All three of my children were married, had families of their own. Two lived in Washington, D.C.; my oldest daughter, a teacher and writer, and her doctor husband lived in a 22-room house in Brookline, Mass., with one son, aged 7.

I visited with them. They had plenty of room and had leased out their third floor to two students. When the semester was up, both students left town and returned to their homes. My daughter suggested I lease their apartment.

"Never live with your children." I remembered my wife's words. I suggested that my daughter first talk it over with her husband. Only if he were happy with the idea would I move in; the plan appealed to me.

We decided to experiment for a six-month period. At the end of that time we could decide if we should continue the arrangement. I paid my rent for six months and moved in.

Living with my daughter, my son-in-law and my grandson, Adam, was something new, an experiment and a challenge. I had the entire top floor, and my own furniture, which I had shipped from Memphis, made it very comfortable. I was beginning to feel like my old self again. Respect and privacy helped, and since my daughter and son-in-law both worked, I had the advantage of using their home during the day.

Retired grandparents have lots of time, leisure to spare. I became available, anxious to be part of the family. I wanted to be home any evening for baby-sitting, happy with the thought of being close to a bright grandson. One flight down, he gave me many hours of pleasure. He came with the territory, visiting me while I was painting. He would share my acrylics, and we'd paint together.

Once, while I was helping him draw and paint, he said, "Pop, mother says you are a writer — how come you are painting?" I looked at my grandson, one of my first discoveries of my newfound happiness, and said, (I was so full of love for him at that moment, I hesitated): "I am a writer, but no one will buy or print my stuff; no one will read my stuff, my stories."

"Grandpaw," he said, "I'll read your stories." Oh, I thought, I hoped I could always enrich his life; he sure has been a treasure-pot for me.

That's how living close to my family has been. Once Adam came up for a visit to present a hand-crayoned Valentine, a red heart. Across the centre he had lettered, "Guess what day this is?" So you live all these 75 years and suddenly, like Alice in Wonderland, you're in a new world.

From time to time I heard him learning to whistle. When is the last time, or the first time, you have heard a kid whistle? It's happiness.

Forget the pains, the problems. There you are, sharing his pleasures. Listen to his questions. Grandchildren are loaded with questions. I have to be ready to discuss the Red Sox, because he says he wants to be a ballplayer when he grows up.

Folks at home can adjust where there is caring, loving. I have grown closer to my children, and I'm thankful I'm able to move about for myself. It's been almost four years since I moved in. I always think back to the lonely times I had trying to find how to live alone, the lonesome nights.

For really no reason, I decided (I hinted) one day that maybe after four years I might move. After all, Adam is almost 12, and, well, four years is a long time for a husband to be with an in-law.

Last year, four months ago, my daughter told me she and Terry, her husband, were thinking of having another child. At 35, if she was going to have another . . . well, would I stay if she got pregnant again? Such a delightful challenge — a request, if you will. Indeed, would I stay! A command performance.

How often does such an honor come your way? A lifetime proposition. After learning how to make a great after-school milkshake, I found out that today's diapers have done away with the safety pin.

What a pleasure to learn that living with children is learning again to live for them.

Up on my kitchen wall I have crayon drawings of flying first basemen, and Valentines reminding me what day it is (and no more lonely nights).

It's Grandfather's Day.

Further Oil Price Rise Predicted

NICOSIA, Cyprus (UPI) — Further rises in the price of oil during 1979 may be unavoidable, Kuwait's Minister of Oil Sheikh Ali Khalifa al-Sabah, said in an interview published today.

"With the market going as it is, I cannot see how further price increases can be avoided during the rest of this year," the Kuwaiti minister said in an exclusive interview with the Middle East Economic Survey.

"It seems to me that the present supply situation is still too tight to allow the consumers to build up their depleted crude oil inventories to any significant degree before the winter.

"The volume of exports by the OPEC-member countries is not running at the levels hoped for earlier in the year. This has led to something of a surge on the spot market where Iranian light, for example, is now fetching around $26 to $27 a barrel, which is some six dollars more than a few weeks ago."

Sheikh Ali pointed to a big dilemma for the consumers. On the one hand, he said, they can try to manage with an uncomfortably low level of stocks in an effort to keep the market as calm as possible. But if, on the other hand, they scramble for crude in order to replenish their inventories, they will inevitably push up prices still further.

Sheikh Ali conceded that the forecast higher price levels, together with measures by the consumer governments to curtail consumption and increase indigenous energy supplies, would at some stage result in in a slackening of demand for OPEC crude.

"Maybe next year," he said, "this will take effect and the market could ease to the point where supply and demand will be in balance with appropriate allowance for rebuilding of inventories, before moving on to a further period of shortage in 1981 or thereabouts."

Meanwhile in Vienna, the OPEC economic commission began meeting at its headquarters today. The session probably will last a week.

Gas-Dry Motorists Sweat and Swear

Automobiles coiled around the same block twice to get at active gas pumps while many fuming California motorists stood bumper-to-bumper in sweltering sun, convinced the odd-even allocation plan was doing little to shorten lines.

The state-imposed odd-even program begun last week so far has failed to unravel those lines at the gas pumps, and coping with the state's second fuel crisis in five years is taking its toll on the public mood and confidence.

Motorists are at the mercy of station owners, some of whom open fuel islands for only an hour a day.

The despair among Los Angeles County's 4.7 million drivers was reinforced during the weekend with longer lines, blistering 100-degree temperatures and an accusation that oil companies were deliberately holding back gas supplies.

"Evidence received during the past few days indicates that some oil companies are acting in a fashion that holds down supplies," California Air Resources Board Chairman Tom Quinn said.

"It certainly raises suspicions," said Quinn, who asked oil companies to explain their actions at a hearing Wednesday in Los Angeles.

Reaction in the long, snaking lines was predictable.

"Well, at least the politicians are waking up and finding out what the public has known all along," Hollywood resident Wes Franklin said. "The oil companies are just putting the squeeze on us so we won't complain when prices go up to a dollar a gallon."

California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. announced Sunday he is preparing emergency "stay open" requirements to keep at least half the gas stations open on weekends.

"The odd-even allocation plan depends on the availability of gasoline on a seven-day basis," the governor said.

Brown, hearing a suggestion by television commentator David Susskind that the allocation plan should already be called a fiasco, conceded it "is not a cure-all," but he said Susskind was "drawing an unduly negative picture."

With 93 percent of all stations closed Sunday, the "odds" have been unable to replenish their tanks since Friday. Many odds are nursing final drops of precious fuel until Tuesday.

Error Puts Calder Just 9 Votes Off

The correction of an error made in transmitting B.C. election results over the telephone in the riding of Atlin has substantially cut the NDP's victory margin.

Socred Frank Calder, the area's MLA since 1949, has now pulled within nine votes of Al Passarell who had been declared the winner.

Passarell was first given 818 votes to Calder's 694.

But an error occurred when figures were phoned in from Cassiar to the returning officer at Stewart.

Returning officer Norman Hamilton said today the poll worker in Cassiar apparently used the figure for the number of votes cast, including spoiled ballots, as the number of votes for the NDP candidate.

Passarell actually received 124 votes in Cassiar, not the 263 he was credited with election night.

That reduces the NDP margin from 124 to nine.

Hamilton said there was nothing wrong with the balloting; just human error when the figures were telephoned in.

Hamilton will count absentee ballots May 23 — the date of the final count.

Depending on those results, a recount is expected to be demanded by either Calder or Passarell.

Calder sat with the NDP until crossing the floor to join the Socreds just prior to the 1975 election.

The Social Credit Party won last Thursday's election with 31 seats to the NDP's 26.

100 Students Killed For Knocking Uniforms

PARIS (AP) — About 100 school children between the ages of eight and 16 were killed by soldiers in the Central African Empire after protesting rules requiring them to buy and wear uniforms, Amnesty International said today.

The Paris office of the human-rights organization said students in the Central African Empire have been demonstrating against the rules about uniforms since the first of the year. The students have thrown stones at many official cars, including that of Emperor Bokassa I.

Amnesty said that on April 18 soldiers of the Imperial Guard swept through homes in four areas of the capital of Bangui, rounded up the children and took them to the prison at Ngarangba.

BOKASSA
. . . freed some

The students were put in small cells sealed so tightly that about 20 of the children suffocated, Amnesty said. Some of the children were stoned by the guards to punish them for throwing stones at the imperial car. Some were stabbed with bayonets and others were beaten to death with clubs spiked with nails.

"Probably 100 children were killed and buried by the guards during the night in a common grave," Amnesty said. "One witness alone counted 62 bodies."

TV Debate Reviews Mixed

Times News Services

The national party leaders' debate Sunday drew a wide range of reviews from the public with many saying New Democratic Leader Ed Broadbent scored the most by dealing with issues.

Charles Templeton, a former Ontario Liberal leader who moderated a leader's debate in 1968, said "there is no question Broadbent won the debate — and no question Clark lost . . ."

(Other election stories page 44)

Undecided voter Bob Brown of Gander, Nfld. said he was most impressed with the NDP leader: "Clark talked twaddle, Trudeau talked history and Broadbent issues."

But Dr. Walter Young, chairman of the University of Victoria's political science faculty, said Progressive Conservative Leader Joe Clark generally appeared to gain the most. "He seemed to be more confident, more polished than I anticipated."

And Paul-Emile Richard, chief editorial writer for Moncton, N.B., L'Evangeline, said: "Trudeau was No. 1, Broadbent was second and poor old Clark was third."

A poll by the CTV television network after the debate found 32-per-cent of viewers thought Trudeau won while Clark and Broadbent were ranked first by 18 per cent each. The rest were undecided.

John Woods, a University of Calgary political analyst, said the average voter now will have to see Broadbent as the strongest man intellectually, in commitment and in character, but will still likely choose between Clark and Trudeau as a matter of course."

Most said the debate was the best of its kind but was unlikely to change many votes.

Bruce Blackadar, television reviewer for the Toronto Star, said there were no winners. The program showed that "no matter how angry the last couple of years have been, particularly as far as the media was concerned, when it comes to the crunch each man acted with civility and good manners."

And Charles McKenzie, national campaign co-ordinator for the fun-loving Rhinocerous Party, said the leaders "waltzed around the issues where it would have been more appropriate to break into a fox trot."

"Pierre Trudeau appeared to be operating on an overdose of ginseng, while Joe Clark gave the impression of man who has daydreams of a coalition government with the Rhinocerous Party and at the same time not really sure how he can explain it to his wife. Ed Broadbent looked like a rumor trying to get started."

Election Act Revamp Urged

A returning officer in Thursday's provincial election says the government should totally revamp the provincial Elections Act "to bring it into the 20th century."

Jim Robertson, returning officer in Saanich and the Islands, was one of several returning officers swamped by people who said they had been enumerated but whose names were not on the voters' list.

Some of the confusion arose from a recent enumeration conducted for the federal election. A provincial enumeration was done last fall, but it was the responsibility of those who were missed to register with the provincial registrar of voters.

Robertson said whole areas were missed during enumeration last fall.

"It's not the fault of the registrar of voters who has done a good job considering the limited funds available," he said. "The whole act must be redrawn and sufficient funds made available to the registrar to carry out his task."

People who swear their names should have been on the list were allowed to vote on Section 80 ballots, which are put into envelopes and labelled with their names. If the name checks out with the registrar's master list, the vote is counted.

Alberni returning officer Denis Thain said he was in danger of running out of Section 80 ballots.

Assassinate Shah, Khomeini Pleads

TEHRAN (AP) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini put a new restriction on his Iranian Islamic revolutionary courts, decreeing execution only for persons who killed people or ordered them killed.

Meanwhile, the ayatollah heading Tehran's revolutionary court appealed to supporters abroad to assassinate Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi, his wife, mother-in-law and sister, and several of his close advisers.

Pars, the official news agency, announced the execution of the 205th man to die before Khomeini's firing squads. Parviz Torabi Marashi, the former governor of the city of Behbehan, in southwest Iran, died before a firing squad, the agency reported. It said he was executed early today for killing, torture and destruction of property.

Khomeini, Iran's Shiite Moslem patriarch and the leader of the revolution that ousted the shah, said in a communique Sunday that death sentences will be limited to those "proven to have killed people" and to "any person who has issued orders for the killing of people or who has committed torture resulting in death."

There was speculation that the order was in response to fears of the Iranian Jewish community and foreign criticism resulting from the execution last Wednesday of millionaire Jewish businessman Habib Elghanian. He was convicted of sending Israel funds that the court said were used to finance the killing of Palestinians.

It was the second restriction placed by Khomeini on the revolutionary courts, which are answerable only to him and his secret revolutionary council and which have sent 204 persons to their death before firing squads. Last month he decreed that soldiers and policemen who committed minor offences during the shah's time were not liable to prosecution.

Uganda Eyes Swap - POWs for Amin

KAMPALA, Uganda (UPI) — Uganda is considering a swap of Libyan prisoners of war for Idi Amin and hopes to publicly hang the deposed dictator after a show trial on war crimes charges, government sources said Sunday.

Western intelligence reports said Amin had been in Libya for at least some of the time since his capital fell last month and Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy remained Amin's staunchest supporter.

No official approach for such a controversial "swap" has been made to Tripoli, the sources said, but earlier reports said Uganda was demanding a "ransom" from Khadafy of several hundred million dollars for the POWS with the option of trading them for Amin.

During the six-month East African conflict when Tanzanian troops invaded southern Uganda and toppled Amin, they captured several dozen of the estimated 3,000 Libyan troops who had been rushed to Kampala to try to prop up Amin.

These prisoners of war are now an embarrassment to Tanzania and Uganda, but both countries were determined to extract a heavy price from Libya for their release.

Amin has been accused of being responsible for the deaths of at least 300,000 people during his eight-year rule and would face certain execution by hanging following a showpiece trial.

Supermice Threat

CAMBRIDGE, England (CP) — Britain is in danger of being overrun by new breeds of supermice, say research scientists in this university town.

Some are growing long fur coats so they can survive in the storage rooms of large meat markets. Others are developing into a breed of commuter mice which come swarming out of subway stations at night to feed on leftovers and scraps outside restaurants.

"The fact is, many mice are becoming immune to rodent poisons," a university spokesman says.

"Mice thrive on any accumulation of refuse. They are very adaptable and a lot more research is needed to combat the growing menace of the British rodent.

"If we're not careful, they may get up a union to protect themselves from unfair exterminatory practices."

PERSIAN RUG

5%, 10% and 20% OFF

IF: There is a Persian rug on the floor, what does that tell you about its owner? Probably that he is well off. Also, he'll be a secure person because a Persian rug is a good saleable item in these inflation ridden times. It is easier to sell expensive oriental carpets today in a sluggish economy than it was in the 1950s and 60s although the average price of an authentic Oriental carpet has greatly increased in recent years. An Oriental rug is an excellent hedge against inflation because its value increases constantly. The reason for this is the increased wealth and industrialization of Mid-East countries. Weavers and master artists are leaving their traditional work and are entering industrial employment. In addition the Shah of Iran had introduced compulsory education thereby effectively eliminating the employment of children in rug weaving says:

Onlookers gawk while Snyman, 24, sits with snake

Cage-with-Snakes Record Shattered

HARTBEESPOORT, South Africa (UPI) — A young carpenter who has spent 37 days in a glass cage with some of the world's deadliest vipers wants to extend his world record, but says "it depends on the snakes."

"My original intention was to last 40 days. Now I might try for 50," Peter Snyman said.

The 24-year-old South African credited his bizarre and deadly dangerous endurance test to a desire to have his name inserted in the Guinness Book of Records.

His companions during the sojourn in a 6-by-8 foot glass cage at the Hartbeespoort Snake and Game Park have been six black mambas, six boomslangs (tree snakes), six Egyptian cobras and six puff adders.

Snyman broke the previous 36-day world record Sunday as a large crowd gathered to gawk at the snakes twisting around his legs and slithering across his bed.

In a brief interview conducted at the cage's open door, Snyman said sharing a room with 24 deadly snakes was a nerve-wracking experience that has left him tired and edgy. It was easy to see why when one of the mambas, whose bite kills in 30 seconds, reared its head to see the visitor.

"If he moves, stand very, very still," said park owner Jack Seale, hovering nearby with a snake stick.

The previous record was set in 1976 by Trevor Kruger, a fellow South African who died in a car accident only months later.

Several others have tried to beat the record. One lasted four days and another emerged after 19 days with a nervous breakdown that landed him in a psychiatric ward.

Snyman, who trained in yoga for his ordeal, said his worst experience was when lightning knocked out the lighting in the cage that offers an alternate source of heat to the snakes — it's either the lighting or Snyman's body.

"I woke up to find them all over me," he said. "It was completely black and one had stuck his face inside my nostril. Another crawled under my glasses and explored the inside of my ear."

Root Canals Slow Elizabeth Taylor

WINCHESTER, Va. (UPI) — Actress Elizabeth Taylor underwent oral surgery over the weekend in a Washington, D.C. hospital, her husband informed a political gathering Sunday.

Sen. John Warner (Republican-Virginia) said his wife was resting comfortably after undergoing five root canal operations, a spokesman for the Virginia senator told the gathering.

Dig Those Pets!

Peoples' pets stories peppered the news during the weekend.

In Elkridge, Md., William Green, who has buried all types of pets in 15 years at Bonheur Memorial Park, is preparing to bury their owners, too. A local appeals board has opened the way for the park to bury people alongside their pets, and Green has already taken four orders for plots: "We've already had calls from Australia and Canada as well as from around the country."

Meanwhile, inToronto, Sheba, the German Shepherd, who was blinded in a smoky fire from which she carried a poodle and four budgies to safety after alerting her master, has been awarded the Hero Of The Year award by the Ontario Humane Society — usually award humans who rescue animals. The dog, still under a veterinarian's care, suffered burns to her face and paws. Her eyes were scorched and she can only now see shadows.

Down in Bethesda, Md., a poor goose not only can't see; it can't anything after tangling with Dr. Sherman A. Thomas and his putter. The Congressional Country Club is buzzing with talk about why the doctor killed a goose on the 17th hole of the exclusive golf course. One theory is that Thomas, who turns over all queries about the incident to his attorney, took his frustrations out on the goose after he missed a putt when the fowl trumpeted — a birdie with a difference, so to speak.

BERNADETTE DEVLIN, ex-Northern Ireland MP, intends to run for the European parliament.

FORMER U.S. heavyweight champ Joe Louis celebrated his 65 birthday Sunday.

JOHN WAYNE is expected to get a Congressional testimonial and a medal struck in his honor.

Another bird story from Maryland concerns Scarlett, one of the world's few surviving peregrine falcons, who is nesting on the 33rd floor ledge of Baltimore's tallest building. Scarlett began life in Ithaca, N.Y., as a subject in the Peregrine Falcon Reintroduction Program, a project based at Cornell University. The ledge not only provides a quiet nesting site, but a good observatory for ornithologists . . .

Grand Ole Opry star Lester Flatt, whose nasel-voiced singing and peppy guitar style epitomized the pulsating spirit of bluegrass music for nearly 40 years, was eulogized in Nashville Sunday as a simple man who reached greatness in his field. Flatt died Friday aged 64.

Opera star Maureen Forrester will receive an honorary doctor of laws degree at Carleton University's spring convocation May 4, the university said today.

A 30-day leave with family and friends has ended for Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood, whose return to active duty today is clouded by military charges that could lead to court-martial and, if guilty, his execution. Garwood, 33 — who is accused of desertion and collaborating with the enemy while a Vietnamese prisoner of war — is scheduled to report to a military base in Great Lakes, Ill., today for a medical examination before reporting to Camp LeJeune, N.C..

Sweden's Queen Silvia, 35, Sunday gave birth to a boy, the royal couple's first son and a brother for Princess Victoria.

And in Romsey, England, Lord Mountbatten has decided to open his country home — where the Queen spent her honeymoon — as a tourist attraction. The 78-year-old Mountbatten, Earl of Burma, said upkeep on his estate, The Broadlands, has become a burden. The house is "a treasure trove of beautiful things," Mountbatten told reporters who attended a preview Saturday. "It's a pity not to let them be seen." He said the Queen, his cousin, and Prince Philip, his nephew, will have to use the side door on future visits, and that Her Majesty "is rather amused."

National defence

This is the first in a series of Times editorials looking at key issues in the federal election. Others in the series will examine the records and promises of the parties in the areas of trade and foreign affairs, national unity and the economy.

National defence is not a big issue in the campaign across the country. Indeed it's an issue most of the politicians tread warily around for fear that too much public attention to it would make them appear as war-mongering, red-baiting fanatics — an attitude that grew up in the anti-Vietnam days of the 1960s and has somehow never disappeared.

In Greater Victoria, however, national defence is an issue. It's an issue because the big Esquimalt base is an extremely important part of the local economy. It's an issue because the proximity of the base has taught Victorians that the defence department's main job is neither war-mongering nor red-baiting. And it's an issue because the incumbent Victoria MP Allan McKinnon is the Conservative defence critic and could reasonably expect to become defence minister if the Tories are elected government next week.

Perhaps that is why Tory leader Joe Clark chose Vancouver Island as the place to make his big defence policy announcements when he was here three weeks ago. Clark's plans should have been enough to gladden the heart of every serviceman. He promised to increase the armed forces manpower by 4,000, to increase the department's capital budget, to upgrade search and rescue capabilities and to proceed immediately with plans for new fighter aircraft and (a special bonus for Victoria here) to proceed with plans for new naval equipment with as much Canadian content as possible in manufacturing.

Curiously, it's almost identical to the Liberals' defence platform. It's so similar in fact that the Liberals were putting abroad a joke that Clark mistakenly read out the government defence policy instead of his own.

The differences, then, are only in details. The Tories and Liberals locally are having a dispute about the best way to proceed with the fighter aircraft purchase. The Tories suggest that millions of dollars could be saved by buying 78 surplus U.S. planes which were going to be shipped to Iran but weren't after the change in government there. The Liberals reply that these planes will become obsolete so quickly there's little point in buying them.

The Liberals are making much political hay by combining Clark's promises of increases in armed forces personnel with his promises of reduction in the size of the civil service over-all. The new enlisted men won't do much good, they argue, if they have to take over jobs previously done by civilian personnel who have been let go because of the public service reduction program

No matter who wins the election, things look good for the portion of our economy based on defence — at least in promises. The promises have, however, been drifting around for so long that either side will have to show concrete results before either the armed forces themselves or the communities that depend on them economically will allow themselves to become truly optimistic.

A small step

It has been so long in the making, and the detailed provisions are so arcane and foreign to all but a coterie of experts that the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty finally negotiated last week between the United States and the USSR has been received more with weary resignation than joyous welcome.

Many Americans and a significant section of the U.S. senate — which must ratify the treaty before it is binding on the U.S. — remain suspicious of the pact. Verification is said to be the key to the whole issue. How can the Americans or the Russians know exactly how many missiles and warheads the other side has?

The U.S. chief negotiator says this will not be a problem because of the sophisticated communications monitoring capacity of the U.S., which includes spy satellites that photograph the ground with incredible accuracy from hundreds of miles above.

"In SALT, we do not rely on trust or faith or hope, or the Soviets' signature, because to put it bluntly, we are dealing with our principal adversary. I know of no way the Soviets could cheat on a scale which could affect the strategic balance without being caught by our intelligence," said George Seignious.

Peace groups are skeptical of SALT's effectiveness when it runs for only six years (it took more than seven to negotiate) and does not reduce the number of weapons of destruction on both sides.

There are many grounds on which to criticize SALT. But those who genuinely seek stability and peace in the world ought to recognize the treaty as at least a small move in that direction.

RICHARD GWYN

Clark survived TV debate

OTTAWA — Like Mohammed Ali the first time he went up against Leon Spinks, the difference being he wasn't so much behind on points as, until this moment, little better than even, Pierre Trudeau opened up on Joe Clark with everything he had in the last moments of their half-hour debate.

He mocked Clark's language: "Let's have a degree of specificity here." He muttered a disdainful, "Oh, Joe." He accused Clark of "a willingness to say to the provinces that whatever they want is right." Most effectively of all, he challenged Clark's claim that he had adopted some of Clark's constitutional policies and watched with a baleful stare while Clark struggled to think of an example, and failed.

Then, suddenly, far too suddenly for Trudeau, their fight was over. The moderator called time. Trudeau and Clark and New Democratic Party leader Ed Broadbent composed themselves behind their transparent plexiglass podiums and delivered their closing generalities to the camera. The show was over.

Defeated on points

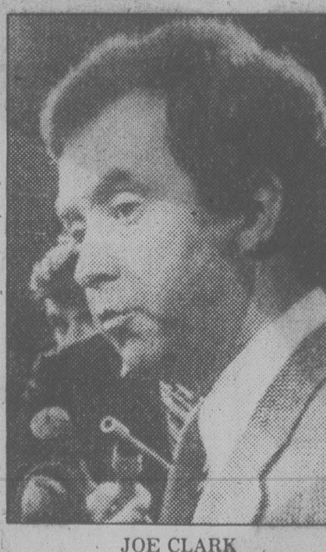
Trudeau had shaken Clark, but he hadn't knocked him down on the political sense of demonstrating that in a one-to-one intellectual encounter they don't belong in the same ring. Indeed, even during their final flurry, Clark got back a hard jab by telling Trudeau: "Have faith that people other than you care about this country."

For Clark, a points defeat at Trudeau's hands (and indeed only a narrow one) amounts, you'd have to guess, to a political victory. To all those voters looking for a change but uncertain whether the country can afford a change to Clark, Clark last night demonstrated that he at least has enough stuff to tangle with the best and most experienced debater in politics, here or in any western country, and to give close to as good as he got.

Yet Clark's, up-from-behind success was mixed. If he held Trudeau, he lost to Broadbent. During their half-hour round, Broadbent, far more persuasively than did Trudeau later, harried Clark on his policies from a stimulative budget deficit to disbanding PetroCanada.

In his best exchange, Broadbent turned Clark's slogan, "a vote for the NDP is a vote for Trudeau", back upon him. In Parliament, Broadbent pointed out, the Conservatives had "voted more often for Trudeau" than had the NDP. Just as Clark was searching for a comeback, their round ended.

Yet, by constantly interrupting and hectoring Clark, Broadbent may have turned off as many viewers as he turned on by his arguments. And, although he outmatched Trudeau head-to-head in their encounter, Broadbent allowed their debate to wind down into an exchange of opinions so amicable that Trudeau began prefacing his replies with a genial "Ed." Broadbent thus may have reinforced the concern of some voters that a vote for the NDP might indeed turn out to be a vote for Trudeau.



JOE CLARK
. . . still in the ring

Cramped by a format that allowed the three network reporters to interrupt the debates with their pet topics — nuclear energy, for example — the two-hour marathon revealed little about the three leaders that most voters don't already know.

Physically the most mobile of the trio, Trudeau looked the most assured and sounded the most adroit yet, particularly when Clark went after him for his treatment of Parliament and Broadbent went after him about Quebec, Trudeau seemed the most defensive of the three.

More confident before the cameras than he's been since this campaign began, Clark still was contained and cautious. He would spot an opening for a good one-liner, like, "Our fundamental political disease has been the sense that the government is going one way, and the people the other," and then would slip out of range behind a cloud of cliches, about Canada's "potential" and about federal-provincial relations as "a partnership."

Pugnacious professor

Broadbent — he wore grey, the others wore beige — came across as a pugnacious economics professor. He corrected Trudeau's statistics: "It was 96 per cent of the applications that FIRA [(Foreign Investment Review Agency] approved." He reeled off details of Australia's resource control legislation. He brought each exchange to the hard-edged realities of jobs, energy, resources, prices.

Here's my personal scoring:

☐ Trudeau over Clark, but only narrowly.

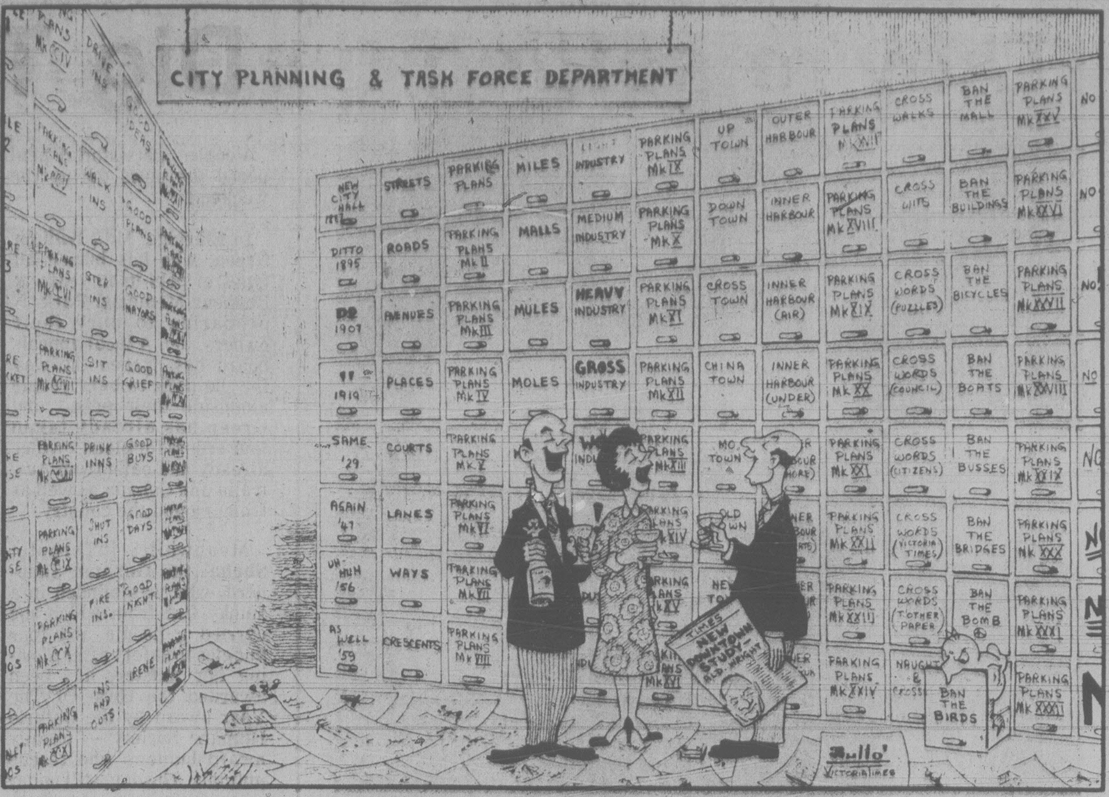
☐ Broadbent over Clark, on all cards.

☐ Broadbent over Trudeau, easily, but with soft gloves.

Clark thus is the winner, provided you accept that Trudeau is behind in the campaign, and so needed a convincing victory in the debate.

Yet, still bobbing about, there's Broadbent. In intellect, if not in television image, he won both his bouts. And he came up with the best line he's yet thought of to explain why a vote for the NDP isn't a vote for Trudeau. Back in the 1972-74 minority Parliament, said Broadbent, the NDP hadn't voted to "prop up" Trudeau, as Clark claimed.

"We voted for increased family allowances, for PetroCanada, for amendments in co-operative housing." The NDP would do it again, as a government, said Broadbent but, as he obviously really hoped, as holder of the balance of power.



" . . . for he's a jolly good fellow, for he's a jolly good fellow . . . "

Merchant marine

I have before me a local newspaper picture of the Canadian Volunteer which was built in Vancouver. Sister ships were the Canadian Exporter and Canadian Importer and were part of thee Canadian government merchant marine. Under the picture is a statement about a strike cancelling the Canadian Volunteer's visit here to load lumber. Do you remember (or are you not aware) that the ships were disposed of because of union trouble?

Why do we now have people suggesting (and wanting us to vote for them) that we have a merchant fleet? What a brain wave! Will the unions act sensibly or differently this time? I do not think so!

Why borrow to build and subsidize to operate, then pay higher rates to move our goods and have irritation or trouble aplenty just to "own" a fleet? One per cent gain and ninety-nine per cent lose or pay! Our children will pay for our blunders.

Moreover, maybe our customers would prefer to choose who moves their purchases. — F. O. Holm, 2964 Harriet Road.

Help amateurs

The Greater Victoria Music Festival has just completed all the events of this year. Participating young musicians certainly gave great pleasure to all those who attended.

It has always puzzled me why the Victoria Symphony has never assigned one of its concerts in each season to inviting the winners of the open piano concerto class, the violin concerto class and the vocal open class to be guest soloists. The role of the symphony is not just providing musical entertainment to the city. It should also play an educational role in the community by encouraging and helping acknowledged local young talents to gain experience in performance. I am sure symphony subscribers would be pleased to listen to those young musicians and give them hearty support.

May the symphony consider adopting my humble suggestion and make it an annual event. — Dr. W. T. Wong, 201-1711 Cook Street.

The NDP Liberals

Please remember an NDP vote is and always has been a vote for the Liberal party. Lewis, Douglas and Broadbent have supported the Trudeau machine for many years and continue to do so. So please remember that an NDP vote is one for Trudeau.

Some union people believe they should vote NDP on account of their union membership.

This is entirely false. I have been a unionist for many years and have never voted either NDP or Liberal; use your own judgment and if you like our arrogant friend Trudeau vote Liberal or NDP.

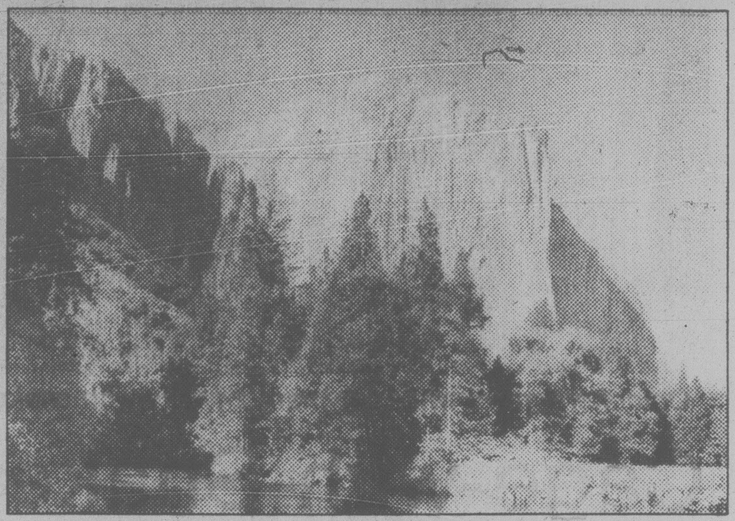
Our prime minister's new boy is of course Ed Schreyer, who recently signed a cabinet bill for $1.8 billion to keep Trudeau and his boys in spending money.

Let's get out and vote and kick them out. — L. V. Cochrane, 75 Crease Avenue.

Choking

I am writing in reference to your article on the controversy of the Heimlich manoeuvre for the choking victim which appeared in the Times May 4 (Choking: To Slap or Not to Slap).

I would appreciate it very much if you would advise your readers that I am not the senior training officer of the Red Cross. I would also like to reiterate that CPR (cardiopulmonary resuscitation), as taught by various agencies in this community, is to standards set by the Canadian Heart Foundation in agreement with the American Heart Foundation. — James A. Tyre, Branch Manager/Training Officer, St. John Ambulance, Victoria Branch.



Yosemite national park — still an attractive destination.

Yosemite Park

In an article in the Times March 3 by Martha Angle and Robert Walters, some serious misstatements of fact about the operation and future of Yosemite National Park were made. They were so serious and unfair that I believe a reply is necessary and in the public interest.

The authors' attitude and tone is best reflected by this statement from the column: "As recently as the mid-1970s, a coalition of insensitive federal officials and executives of a conglomerate corporation had grandiose plans for the commercial exploitation of Yosemite."

The aware reader, I am sure, recognizes such broad sweeping charges and intemperate language as indicative of writers with an axe to grind and not objective, careful reporters.

There is much I could write in response to their charges which, incidentally, were made with no attempt to talk with any member of my staff, and judging from the lack of quotes or attribution, no interviews with National Park Service personnel either. Unfortunately, the space allowed most letters to the editor does not allow the type of careful analysis your readers deserve.

What grieves me about a column such as the one in question is that the owners of Yosemite National Park — the public — are deprived of an opportunity to learn what is being done by Yosemite Park and Curry Co., and its parent company, MCA Inc., in co-operation with concerned and dedicated National Park Service staff members to safeguard this natural treasure while making it possible for Americans to enjoy it.

If any of your readers have specific questions about Yosemite National Park and our activity in protecting it, I invite their inquiries and promise a personal answer. — Edward C. Hardy, Chief Operating Officer, Yosemite Park and Curry Company, Yosemite National Park, California.

Co-operative effort

There are those who consider the present free enterprise system to be the best possible and those who think of it as quite unsatisfactory. What both groups sometimes fail to realize is that Adam Smith's laissez-faire theory no longer exists in practice. If you want to be technical, what we have today is an oligopoly, which is near monopolistic control of the economy by a comparatively small number of large corporations.

To those who yearn for greater free enterprise I refer them to the late 18th and early 19th centuries when it was at its height. Do we really want children back in the mines and factories, coupled with the abject poverty described by Charles Dickens? Would we be content to wipe out unemployment insurance, welfare, old age pensions, unions and a host of other benefits gained in modern times?

If you will examine what makes great companies like General Motors so successful I suggest you will find it to be careful planning, not only for the immediate future, but for years ahead. They make cars under many different names and models but the production of them is not haphazard, but carefully thought out ahead of time. Teamwork does it just as team work wins hockey games, rather than a reliance on individual effort by each player. My suggestion is that we follow their lead and encourage the government to produce a national plan, not necessarily in order to own or run businesses but to encourage each to work together for the best interests of Canada. General Motors is a great example of co-operative effort by their different units. Could we not carry this a step further and make it apply to the economy as a whole? — F.L.P. Anderson, 409-2174 Cadboro Bay Road.

Lesser of evils

Will any of the candidates for the federal election tell me why I should vote for any one of them?

If I vote under the deceptive slogan that one must choose the lesser of several evils, this would mean that I was accepting that we will have an evil government, no matter who I vote for. And the successful candidate would consider that he had a mandate from me, to do this evil.

As I want to be a responsible voter, because I do love my native land — this Canada of ours — I do not propose to vote for any candidate who will not give me a firm undertaking to reduce total taxation, stop aid to Communist countries, halt the metric madness, restore capital punishment, and end the policy of compulsory bilingualism, most especially in the face of Quebec's unilingualism (which apparently the present government is supporting and is certainly not opposing).

Is there any candidate prepared to respresent me on these and similar issues? We need desperately in Canada, men of honor in Ottawa, men who realize that they are employed by Canadians, who pay their salaries, and expect to have their wishes put into practice. — Beatrice A. Williams, 2048 Carrick Street.

Pro-Life says thanks

The Pro-Life Society of Victoria is most grateful to those citizens who supported our tag day on April 27. Your financial and moral support will help us in our work. Our main thrust is educational. We strive to instil, especially in our young people, knowledge of and respect for the unborn child. Pro-Life exists to assert and defend the right to life of the innocent. Pro-Life draws attention to the basic nature of this right, on which all others depend.

We believe that the civilization of a society is measured by the care and protection it gives to its weakest members. Through your generosity, we will continue to defend the right to life of the innocent, the unborn child. — Thomas Dunwoody, Victoria Pro-Life Society.

They're setting the stage for a bitter Parliament

DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — The campaign is setting the stage for a bitter 31st Parliament. Such bitterness seems certain unless — and this is unlikely — there is a Progressive Conservative sweep to 160 or so seats.

Most campaigns are soon forgotten. Their details and emotions fade away. The partisans, except in the parliamentary caucuses, subside. Why won't it be the same after May 22?

While there are several parts in the answer, the main one is the absolute way in which this campaign has become a plebiscite on Trudeau and Clark. Each leader, and his party, especially on the dominant and most pervasive medium, the TV screen, and particularly in the network newscasts, is seen again and again with dead-set aim on the other.

Before we look at this personal denigration now grown into an orchestration, those of you with longer memories will remember a curse on federal politics in the years between 1962 and 1967.

Diefenbaker and Pearson regarded each other with mean disrespect. The former, in particular, spoke about it.

While Pearson wasn't a match for his rival at invective, he also wasn't the single focus of attack or defence. His colleagues — the Pickersgills, Sharps, Gordons, Martins, Chevriers — took the brunt of much partisan criticism and laid it on . . . especially on the Chief.

The partisan strife in the House of Commons in those years was very vigorous, but it was given some diffusion because of the civil war in the Tory party and caucus (Dalton Camp and all that).

While the odium heaped on Diefenbaker in the campaigns of 1963 and 1965 has similarities to the total belittling of Joe Clark under way this time, the Liberals then seemed both less desperate and more positive in their alternatives in both men and policies. This time they have put absolutely everything on Pierre Trudeau and aimed every possible slight at Joe Clark.

TV news and the Tory TV spot commercials have both focussed on Pierre Trudeau and on his arrogance, nastiness, and pettiness.

This "hype" about the two leaders — the stress on their failings — has been doing its work. Let me give examples:

A Prairie New Democrat MP, a veteran campaigner, told me last week: "So far I've spoken to people on some 2,500 doorsteps. They're nice enough to me. They're not nice about Trudeau; they're almost as snide about Clark. I worry that Broadbent and NDP policies are being lost in the animosity over Pierre and Joe."

A TV producer has been doing "streeters" in regular fashion in several eastern Ontario ridings. People are being asked what they have to say about the '79 campaign. While some older people will express phrases like "Time for a change" or "I think the Liberal government has been fine," the majority of those who speak out, especially younger voters, are scathing about either Trudeau or Clark, or both of them.

The producer's estimate is that the local candidates and the party platforms don't mean much in comparison to the inadequacies of the leaders. What hit him most was that even those who back Trudeau, mentioning how "strong" he is or what a world leader he is, rarely show any liking or caring for him.

So far in this campaign I've been into 20 ridings, east and west and talked mainly with campaign workers of three parties. Even in Sudbury, heavy with local issues and with Speaker Jerome of the House as Liberal candidate, I have hit much more than anything else: Trudeau as a mean, arrogant authoritarian; Clark as a spineless, rather stupid nincompoop.

On the good evidence of polls there is not a sweep in the wind, no cleansing sweep as in '58 or in '68. These sweeps brought in a most confident prime minister and a chastened opposition, most concened with its survival and with remedying its failures.

That is, minority government of either Liberal or Tory kind is likely, or a slender majority government of either kind may just be possible.

As I read it, each of the major parties will have a caucus of at least 100 MPs. Whether well above that or not, the Liberals will have a powerful core of French-Canadian MPs, probably as many as 85.

The Tories will have their core of 55 to 60 for sure from the West.

The scenario in MPs, then, is almost certainly for adversary regional blocs. This is not unfamiliar in our history. But each group this time will be led by a man whom the others detest and ridicule, maybe even hate.

One good reason Broadbent, the NDP leader, has "clammed up" his strategy about a minority Parliament is that he's realized the literally awful dilemma he and his caucus may face, caught in a Parliament between two bitter leaders and parties that have discredited each other.

The irony I see in this bitter 31st Parliament ahead now seems more and more inividual to myself. I do not see Trudeau as a strong leader — that's mostly style and mannerism. He's essentially a super-bureaucrat. I do not see Clark so much a strong leader as a manager of considerable competence. But those aren't the images each will bring to the next House. The short-run parliamentary future looks grim.

A change in Rhodesia

By ANTHONY LEWIS
New York Times

LONDON — Those of us who have been skeptical of Ian Smith and his internal settlement have an obligation to recognize that things are not exactly the same since the election in Rhodesia. The political equations have changed, in Salisbury and London and Washington.

It was a flawed election by Western standards. Hundreds of thousands of black Rhodesians are confined in "protected villages," under military control, and could hardly decide freely whether to vote. Others came under pressure by "auxiliaries" working for one or another politician. Most of the country is under martial law. The government evidently understated the voting potential, so the actual turn-out would seem higher.

But with all those caveats, it is a fact that a very large number of black Rhodesians voted. The Patriotic Front guerrillas said they would stop the election, and they did not. If some people were coerced, and if the percentage turnout was exaggerated, still many people obviously wanted to vote.

Why? On a recent visit to Rhodesia, I sensed above all a desire to end the killing and the uncertainty of daily life — a feeling as strong among blacks as whites. The vote can fairly be read as an expression of that feeling. It was not a vote for a particular constitutional arrangement or policy; details were not at issue. It was a vote against war and for the idea of change by a political process.

Bishop Muzorewa flanked by Ian Smith and Chief Chirau at press conference in Washington last fall.

The election had concrete results in terms of personalities. It deflated two of the free blacks with whom Smith had made his internal settlement. Chief Jeremiah Chirau won no seats. The Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole won so few that he denounced the election and now threatens to use his auxiliaries against the next government. One wonders what Sen. S. I. Hayakawa and other right-wing Americans who embraced Sithole on his tour of the United States with Smith last year think now.

The big winner was Bishop Ebel Muzorewa. Under a system designed by Smith to prevent the emergence of a dominant black party, Muzorewa won 51 of the 100 seats in the new assembly. Even those most doubtful about the whole election cannot rationally deny that the bishop showed impressive popular support.

A big question now is whether Muzorewa will be able to convert his electoral success into power. He will be prime minister, but under a constitution that leaves in white hands all the instruments of real power: the army, the civil service, the police, the judiciary.

One possibility is for the bishop to try to change the constitution. Last January he said he would like to do that, but he climbed down after whites protested. With his demonstrated support, and with his constituents looking for evidence of real change, the bishop may well move now to get more of the substance of power into the hands of the black majority.

But the whites, with their disproportionate numbers in the new assembly, can block any constitutional amendments. Smith himself will be in the bishop's cabinet possibly as minister of defence, and will have a particular hold on the loyalty of the army. So it would take political skill of a high order for Muzorewa to get change by internal agreement — and many doubt that he has that skill.

Another route for the bishop would be to seek a settlement with the Patriotic Front — or at least with one of its two leaders, Robert Mugabe. Muzorewa is known to dislike and fear the other guerrilla leader, Joshua Nkomo. But he has hinted in the past that he could make a deal with Mugabe.

The trouble is that, after the election, feelings are not likely to be conducive to successful negotiation. The bishop no doubt believes that his position has been vindicated and that he does not need to make any concessions to the external composition — especially if, as reported, South Africa has offered him massive support. Mugabe, having spurned the election, will not be in a hurry to accept its winner as a legitimate figure with whom to negotiate.

From an international point of view the fundamental problem remains the same: how to achieve a form of majority rule whose legitimacy is accepted widely enough to end the war. Muzorewa's position is different now: weightier. But he still must prove that he is his own man, not Smith's.

In this new situation Britain and the United States will continue to have large parts to play. Britain, as the legal if mythical sovereign power in Rhodesia, has a particular ability to convey legitimacy when the practical moment comes. The United States has a strong interest in preventing an enlargement of the guerrilla war into an East-West confrontation.

There has been speculation that a Conservative British government would simply recognize a Muzorewa government as the legitimate expression of majority rule. I doubt that. Key Conservatives know that, so long as the internal regime is widely considered Smith's cat's-paw, such a step would have bitter consequences for Britain: to name just one, the Commonwealth might well break up. There are new factors at work, butthe struggle for a Rhodesian solution goes on.

The sound of musitics

NEW YORK — Although the music recording industry now challenges television as the most powerful entertainment force in the country, American politicians have been slow to exploit the potential of this new image-building mechanism.

Despite Jerry Brown's well-publicized dates with the recording star, Linda Ronstadt, most politicians are still so absorbed with television that they are unaware of what records can do to promote their careers. There hasn't been a really effective use of music for political gain since Franklin Roosevelt commandeered "Happy Days Are Here Again" to persuade the country, despite considerable evidence to the contrary, that they really were.

It has remained for Korea, which has given us so many lessons in advanced politics lately, to show the way in this field. This time the lesson comes not from South Korea, which gave us the Reverend Moon and the well-bought congressmen, but from the Communist North, domain of Gen. Kim Il Sung.

A recent catalogue of records available from General Kim's studios suggests how American politicians might effectively apply the power of music.

"Song of General Kim Il Sung" is available on two recordings, one by the Korean People's Army Song and Dance Ensemble, the other by the Mansudae Art Troupe. "Song of President Jimmy Carter" may not be a title to seize the millions, but properly executed by a group like the Bee Gees it might very well keep the president near the top of the charts for months.

What about "Kim Il Sung Flowers in Full Bloom All Over the World?" It would be a bit excessive, in view of the present state of his foreign policy, for the president to adapt the message here to his own uses, but it might be easily adapted to a Ronald Reagan campaign. A little music about Reagan flowering in full bloom might offset suggestions that he is a mite long in the tooth to be running for president again.

Three other records inspired by Kim Il Sung — "Glory to the Leader," "Our Ardent Love for the Leader" and "Our Hearts Long for the Leader" — could obviously be recorded with an American beat by Meat Loaf and used to inspire a following for Sen. Edward Kennedy.

"Let Us Hurrah Reunification With the Leader," like "Let's Greet Spring at the Terraced Field," is a rallying summons-in-song to happiness in Kim's government. Both could be readily converted by Fleetwood Mac into joyous chords of uplift to pump some life into the dormant presidential campaign of Gerald Ford.

Why does Richard Nixon come and go, always talked about as a lively prospect for resurrection, but never finally escaping his San Clemente exile? Because his coming and going makes no music, and is not scored to a beat that makes the masses yearn to march in unison behind him.

Kim's songwriters have foreseen the possibility that such calamity may occur and have music available to conquer it in "We Will Come Back With the General." Let Lou Reed convert it to punk rock, and Nixon may have a battle hymn to move the Republic.

Another group that makes no music is the feminist movement. Happy days will never be here again for the friends of the Equal Rights Amendment until they sing more sweetly, the better to charm the dour state legislators out of the clutches of the Chamber-of-Commerce lobby.

General Kim's recording industry has the song already waxed. It is a female solo entitled "We Embroider the New Spring of Liberation." If Bella Abzug can master the high notes, it could put ERA in the Top 40.

For the Chamber of Commerce and all conservatives, carping at George Meany in mimeograph prose has become a self-defeating habit. Let them sway the toiling masses instead with song, as Kim has done, warming their hearts and elevating their thoughts from unworthy concern about wages by singing "Labor Is a Song."

Why do farmers drive tractors to Washington and make it difficult for commuting government workers to get to their coffee breaks? Because their souls have not been stirred to beauty by the magic of songs like "The Moon Rises to Meet the Bumber Crop," "The Good Harvest Brought About by the Leader's Care" and "The Abundant Orchard Filled With Happiness."

Kim's catalogue has all three melodies waiting to be recorded by the Mormon Tabernacle Choir with solos by Paul Williams. Can we doubt they would take the truculence out of these unhappy farmers and leave Washington traffic free to move?

Also available is "Everybody Gets Younger and Sings This Happiness." Recorded by Lawrence Welk with just a hint of champagne music, it could be a blessing to politicians by taking the retired generation's mind off Social Security and delighting it with contemplation of the imminent arrival of youth.

You could win these fabulous Mercedes-Benz AUTOMOBILES

Win...with the turn of a key!

You could win* one of ten 1979 Mercedes-Benz 240D sedans available to be won just by opening your first Royal Trust Savings or Chequing account. Simply visit your local Royal Trust Savings Branch, open either a Savings or a Chequing account with a minimum deposit of $100, and you're eligible to try a key in the two prize locks on display. Open both a Savings and a Chequing account, and your teller will give you a second key to try in the locks.

If your key opens the "Mercedes" lock, you'll win* a 240D sedan (approximate retail value $20,750).

If your key opens the "Silver Dollar" lock, it will be redeemed by the teller for a Canadian silver dollar.

Your key is guaranteed to open one of the locks.

And enter the Grand Prize Sweepstakes!

You could win both a Mercedes-Benz 450SL roadster and a Mercedes-Benz 240D sedan just by making deposits into your Royal Trust Savings or Chequing account.

Each time you deposit $100 into either account your teller will give you an official "Grand Prize" entry form (a maximum of 50 entry forms per deposit is allowed). Simply fill out the entry form and deposit it into the ballot box located in a Royal Trust Savings Branch.

If your entry is selected in the Grand Prize draw and you hold both a Royal Trust Savings account and a Royal Trust Chequing account with a balance of at least $100 in each on August 2nd, 1979, you'll win* the 450SL roadster and the 240D sedan (approximate retail value $63,150)...just for saving and chequing at Royal Trust.

If your entry is selected in the Grand Prize draw and you only hold a Royal Trust Savings account (or only a Chequing account) showing a balance, on August 2, 1979, of at least $100, you'll win* the fabulous 450SL roadster (approximate retail value $42,400).

Come in today! This promotion closes on June 30, 1979. The Grand Prize draw will be held on or about August 2, 1979.

*Subject to you correctly answering a time-limited, skill-testing question.

Toronto

The Toronto stock market was mixed in light mid-afternoon trading today.

The TSE 300 index was up .88 to 1,459.23 but declines outnumbered advances 175 to 157 with 213 issues unchanged.

Among the 14 stock groups within the composite index, management companies led the eight gainers while real estate and construction led the six losers.

Volume of trading by 2 p.m. EDT was 1.84 million shares, compared with 2.17 million shares at the same time Friday.

Trading in shares of Husky Oil Ltd. was halted at the opening for dissemination of news that Alberta Gas Trunk Line Co. Ltd., which holds 49 per cent of Husky's shares, will acquire about 20 per cent of the shares held by the Neilson family at $48 a share.

New York

The stock market declined slightly in quiet trading today, still caught up in energy uncertainties.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 16.98 last week, lost another 1.64 to 828.92 by 2 p.m.

Losers held a small lead over gainers in the mid-afternoon count of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said investors remained fearful that gasoline supply problems could depress economic activity in a number of important industries.

But they also noted buying interest in stocks of companies that could stand to benefit from the situation.

Greyhound, for example, was up ⅞ to $14½ in active trading.

Another "hot" group was the grain-and alcohol-processing companies, thanks to speculation focusing on gasohol, an auto fuel produced by mixing gasoline with ethyl alcohol made from grain.

A. E. Staley Manufacturing rose ⅞ to $24¾; Publicker Industries climbed 1⅝ to $11.

Montreal

Prices slipped slightly in light noontime trading on the Montreal Stock Exchange today.

Volume was 75,436 shares traded, compared with 135,310 shares traded up to the same time Friday.

The composite index dipped 0.21 to 245.99, with industrials down 0.42 to 242.94, and banks 0.08 to 299.53. Papers edged up 0.59 to 160.03, and utilities 0.34 to 220.98.

Bank of Nova Scotia dropped ¼ at $22, Consumers Gas ⅛ at $21½, Gulf Oil Canada ½ at $45½, Inco ⅝ at $23⅛, Pancanadian Petroleum ¾ at $48, and Toronto Dominion Bank ⅛ at $22⅝.

London

The London stock market fell sharply near the close of light trading today.

The Financial Times index of 30 industrials closed at 525.4, off 8.4.

Stocks were generally lower but mining shares rallied.

VANCOUVER

Prices were down in moderately active trading on the Vancouver Stock Exchange today. Volume to 10:54 a.m. was 1,381,546 shares.

In the industrials, International Ionarc was unchanged at .34 on 5,000 shares and Potter Distillers A was unchanged at $1.50 on 1,713. Austin Investment was down .05 at .90 on 1,700 and Gregory Industries was unchanged at $5½ on 1,700. Kaiser Resources was up ⅛ at $19⅜ and Third Dimension Industries was unchanged at .25.

Vestor Exploration was up .06 at $1.02 on 32,800 to lead trading on the resource and development board. Dora Explorations was up .03 at .58 on 26,500, New Cinch Uranium rose .07 to $1.02 on 21,930 and Carolin Mines jumped .60 to $7.90 on 21,000. David Minerals was up .12 at $2.72 and Galveston Petroleum increased .05 to $2.00.

Gains Tax Blamed for Takeover Fever

By LAWRENCE MOULE
The Canadian Press

Canada's capital gains tax, born in controversy in 1972, continues to be under siege.

Though some say capital gains brings equality to the tax system, many criticize it as a giant constipator of that system.

Joe Clark, federal Progressive Conservative leader, has vowed to abolish the tax if he gains power. The royal commission on corporate concentration, in its final report in March, 1978, said the capital gains tax depresses the economy. Abolition, it said, would simplify the tax system and contribute to a better investment climate in Canada.

Most recently, J. Pearce Bunting, president of the Toronto Stock Exchange, attacked the capital gains tax on two fronts.

Bunting said in an interview the tax has contributed to the recent rash of corporate takeovers and has inhibited the growth of new companies.

The tax accounts for less than one per cent of total federal tax revenues. In 1976, the latest year for which figures are available, $235 million in capital gains revenues flowed into federal coffers.

Bunting said the bulk of capital gains revenues accrues from the sale of real estate. Nevertheless, the application of the tax to stock gains is a factor in keeping stock prices low. This, in turn, invites takeovers through stock purchases.

"It simply is less expensive to buy a company and its plants than it is to building new plants," Bunting said.

"This is leading to a concentration of Canadian industry."

Bunting said stock prices expressed as multiples of per-share profits are also low on a historical basis.

Capital gains taxes affect most seriously young, fast-growing companies. Such companies do not pay dividends but attract investors by the prospect of growth leading to higher prices.

Bunting said that since the capital gains tax tends to reduce stock prices, it is a disincentive to entrepreneurship.

A joint committee of members of Canadian stock exchanges and the Investment Dealers Association has been making representations to the federal finance department regarding the capital gains tax for about five years.

Japan Dollars Here Urged

TORONTO (CP) — A business professor says the economic needs of Japan and Canada coincide and there should be further investment in joint projects.

Richard Wright, a professor with McGill University's faculty of management, spoke at a conference at York University on Canadian economic relations with Japan.

Wright said conditions look favorable for Japanese investment in exploiting Canadian raw materials.

"Japanese and Canadian investment interests," he said, "fit well in such sectors as petroleum, fish products, forest products, thermal coal, uranium and non-ferrous metals."

Carl Nickle, president of Conventures Ltd. of Calgary, said Japan is a logical source of capital for energy projects in Canada.

He said Japan needs energy and Canada has huge energy potential so it is logical to look to Japan for capital.

Another speaker, Charles McMillan of York University's faculty of administrative studies, said Canada can learn a great deal from Japan in labor-management techniques.

He said workers in both countries are attaining higher educational levels and want to put their knowledge to work.

Japan is handling this by shifting labor intensive industries abroad and reorganizing its resources into sectors that are management, capital and technology intensive, he said.

Canada has not taken this approach so it is no surprise that some of our most strike-prone industries are thoe where technological change is critical, McMillan said.

Auto Trade Woes Deepen

TORONTO (CP) — Patrick Lavelle, president of the Automotive Parts Manufacturers' Association, said today Canada's automotive trade deficit with the United States "more than quadrupled in the first quarter of 1979, reaching $478 million."

Lavelle said this was an increase of $394 million from the same period a year ago.

As well, he said the Canadian deficit in automotive parts grew by 50 per cent to $1.2 billion compared with $768 million in the same 1978 period.

Exports of automotive parts increased by 26 per cent to $1.145 billion while imports advanced to $2.315 billion for a gain of 38 per cent.

Lavelle said total trade in the automotive sector continued to grow at a record rate, advancing by $1.5 billion to $6.6 billion, up from $5.1 billion for the same period one year ago.

"The preliminary quarter figures confirm a serious deterioration in Canada's trade position in the automotive sector with the United States," Lavelle said.

"Based on the available figures, Canada's over-all automotive deficit could approach $2 billion by year end with the parts deficit well in excess of $4 billion."

Toyota Now Boosting Overseas Purchases

TOKYO (AP) — Toyota Motor Co., Japan's largest motor vehicle manufacturer, says it is planning to purchase $4 billion in auto parts from overseas in 1979.

since the beginning of the year, the company had already signed purchase contracts with seven companies including General Motors Corp. and General Electric Co. of the United States, and it is planning to negotiate with seven other foreign concerns by the end of the year, a Toyota Motor spokesman said.

Last year, Toyota bought auto parts like tires, materials for seat covers and headlights worth about $2.5 billion from seven companies in four countries — the United States, Britain, France and Canada.

The seven overseas companies with which Toyota has signed purchase contracts are: GM, GE, and Chatham Manufacturing Co. of the United States; Michelin of France; Semperit A,G. of Austria and Courtaulds Ltd. and Kangol Magnet Ltd. of Britain, the spokesman said.

Each contract is for one year, but if both sides agree, the term will be automatically extended.

The parts obtained from overseas will be used mainly for export cars, the spokesman added.

Calgary Makes Cash On Industrial Sites

CALGARY (CP) — The city of Calgary once developed industrial parks because no one else was interested. Now it is a successful competitor to private developers.

High demand for office, warehouse and manufacturing space has turned industrial land development into a profit venture, one the city is unlikely to abandon. The city still owns, services and sells most of Calgary's industrial land.

Land director Bob Leitch says his organization is just as successful as any private developer.

Although he declines to reveal his department's profit from industrial park development, he says that last year the city sold 200 acres of serviced industrial property for more than $8.5 million.

If land supplies can be maintained, 1979 should be an even better year.

"We've always made a profit from development," says Leitch. "It's a funny market, but it's been a very successful one."

Because the city's industrial development business began almost 20 years ago, its has gone through several high- and low-demand cycles.

But since Calgary's population reached 500,000, there has been little doubt about Calgary's future industrial growth, Leitch said.

"We've reached that level where we're providing our own market. The industries that started here 10 or 15 years ago are spinning off."

Jim Jenner, city industrial land representative, said that since 1976 supplies of light and heavy industrial sites have been outstripped by demand.

While privately-developed industrial parks stress controls over appearance of buildings and storage areas, city properties are left with most of what one developer calls the dirtier industries.

Perhaps because of that and because the city bought its industrial holdings when real estate was relatively cheap, the land department can charge up to 20 per cent less than private developers ask for industrial acreage.

Leitch said that early land-banking gave Calgary some of the country's most reasonably-priced industrial real estate and it offers a lure for secondary businesses looking for a new home.

The city sells serviced industrial land for $90,000 to $150,000 per serviced acre, he says.

"That's about 25 per cent lower than Edmonton."

Jenner says he thinks the city's profit margin may be lower than that of a private developer.

Edper Probed

TORONTO (CP) — A director of the Ontario Securities Commission says the commission has subpoenaed several persons in connection with a formal investigation of recent share purchases of Brascan Ltd. by Edper Equities Ltd.

Charles Salter said the investigation is being conducted under the securities act but he could not comment on details.

Last month, Edper Equities Ltd. of Toronto bought 3.3 million Brascan shares on the American Stock Exchange. The purchases gave Edper 31 per cent of Brascan's shares.

Salter said the Ontario commission is co-operating with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission in studying the transaction.

Husky Oil Founders, Alta. Gas Make Deal

CODY, Wyo. (AP) — The founding family of Husky Oil Co. has agreed to sell its 20 per cent interest in the Canadian and American refining company to a Canadian firm for an estimated $106 million.

In an announcement last weekend, Glenn Nielson, of Cody, said he and his son James will sell their approximately 2.2 million shares of Husky Oil Ltd. to Alberta Gas Trunk Line Co. Ltd. of Calgary.

The sale would give Alberta Gas a controlling interest in Husky. Last year Alberta Gas acquired 49.9 per cent of Husky's approximately 11 million shares of stock.

Cody-based Husky Oil Co. is the American subsidiary of Husky Oil Ltd. of Calgary and operates refineries in Cody and Cheyenne and North Salt Lake, Utah. The Canadian parent firm has refineries in Alberta and British Columbia.

Don't Just Blame the Worker . . .

By LeROY POPE
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK — If the average American worker is less productive than his or her grandfather, the blame belongs entirely to management, says Theodore Barry & Associates of Los Angeles, management consultants.

"There is no doubt productivity is declining," Barry said. "It grew about 2 per cent annually between 1965 and 1973. From 1973 to a year ago, it averaged one per cent growth and last year productivity increased only 0.8 per cent."

Barry said various surveys showed that while Grandpa spent 80 to 85 per cent of his time on the job producing, today's workers actually are busy only 55 to 60 per cent of the time.

"That means that in all occupations where dollar output can be measured in terms of worker time spent usefully, today's worker produces only 55 to 60 cents worth of work for a dollar's pay against the 80 to 85 cents worth his grandfather gave for a dollar's pay."

The Barry company recently studied 40 U.S. corporations where Barry programs to increase productivity have been introduced.

As a result of these programs and the reactions of management to them, Barry found that many of the assumptions widely held by the public, businessmen and even economists are false.

The decline in recent years cannot be blamed on the labor unions, he said. The unions have been around too long and were quite as powerful in years when productivity still was rising as they are now.

Barry said some economists have blamed falling productivity on the entry into the labor force of so many women and teenagers, but he said it doesn't take women and teenagers long to adapt to the job and develop skills and productivity equal to adult males.

Other economists blame a decline in technological innovation; still others talk about low morale and a great many say the prime cause of falling productivity is inadequate investment in new facilities.

Barry said a recent study by The Conference Board, a private business research group, showed worker morale is generally high. He said, also, "it is a historic fact that fluctuation in capital investment in an industrialized country can only affect about 15 per cent of the total level of productivity."

Neither can government regulation be given a major share of the blame for falling productivity, Barry said.

That eliminates everybody except management.

"Despite our many business schools, middle managers by and large just don't know how plan, direct and manage the working forces," he said. "Upper level management contributes to the deplorable mess. Falling productivity in a company often reflects ignorance or negligent lack of foresight at the top," Barry said.

Barry's company, like one or two other large consulting firms, has worked out an efficiency system for middle management, a counterpart of the many time study and other efficiency procedures for blue collar workers put into effect in American industry in the past 60 years.

INCREASE SEEN IN CANADA JOBS

WASHINGTON (CP) — A survey by Manpower Inc., the U.S.-based temporary help company, says there should be "gradual, but steady increases" in employment opportunities in Canada between April and June.

The company bases its conclusion on interviews about hiring intentions with nearly 1,000 Canadian companies.

Manpower says 30.5 per cent of respondents said they expect to hire more people in the second quarter than they did in the January-March first quarter. In 1978, only 29 per cent were forecasting more hiring for the comparable period.

The survey also found only 4.7 per cent of companies expect to hire fewer employees than in the first quarter. This is a significant drop from 6.2 per cent who predicted less hiring in the second quarter in 1978.

Interviews with employers in 25 cities across Canada indicated to Manpower that most of the new job opportunities will be in mining and construction industries.

That Multi-Million $$ Stew For Two Big Soup Firms Finally Comes off the Boil

PITTSBURGH (AP) — H. J. Heinz, the ketchup and pickle people, and Campbell Soup Co., the largest canned soup producer in the United States, have ended a three-year anti-trust battle.

Judge Hubert Teitelbaum of U.S. district court on last week dismissed lawsuits and countersuits the two food giants had filed against each other since 1976 involving charges of illegal pricing techniques, deceptive advertising and discriminatory promotions.

"It involves the original suit, the counterclaim and the counter-counter claim; everything," said Donald Wiley, vice-president, secretary and general counsel for Heinz.

The alleged abuses included:

—A 1969 Federal Trade Commission (FTC) finding — first brought to the FTC's attention by Heinz — that Campbell television advertisements used glass marbles in soup bowls to make the garnish stand out and its soup look thicker.

—And a federal Food and Drug Administration seizure of cases of Heinz ketchup — at the instigation of Campbell — to check for excess tomato rot.

Wiley said Teitelbaum dismissed the suits after an out-of-court settlement between the rivals. Neither Heinz nor Campbell would disclose the terms of the agreement, but both sides were ordered to bear their own costs, expenses and fees.

The court duel began in 1976 when Pittsburgh-based Heinz accused Campbell, based in Camden, N.J., of monopolizing the soup market. Heinz, which abandoned brand-name soup sales in 1973, asked for $105 million damages, to be trebled if anti-trust law violations were proved.

In documents filed with the 1976 suit, Heinz said it had a 12-per-cent share of the U.S. canned condensed soup market and said Campbell controlled 80 per cent. Heinz still markets some private-label soups.

Wiley would not comment on whether the settlement would pave the way for Heinz to re-enter the brand soup market. "That's speculation," he said. "I don't know."

After Heinz filed the first suit, Campbell retaliated with a countersuit, claiming Heinz monopolized the institutional ketchup market. The suit charged Heinz refused to sell ketchup to food-service customers unless they agreed to buy other company products.

Heinz responded to that $15.5-million suit with a complaint that Campbell used the same alleged technique to push its vegetable drink, V-8 juice.

His Rent-an-Expert Business Booming

TORONTO (CP) — For rent: engineers, technicians . . .

Tom Davis can supply them — as well as draftsmen, shop floor laborers and a whole host of other personnel — on a short-term contract basis.

Davis, president of T. E. G. International Ltd., says his "rental" business is flourishing because it caters to the high-technology industries which often experience boom-or-bust cycles.

For example, an aviation firm which lands a big contract would require a huge pool of technical talent only during the initial stages of design and production.

"In order to avoid massive layoff of permanent employees at a later date, a firm will use our personnel just as long as it needs them," Davis said in an interview.

"The trenemdous market fluctuations in the engineering and manufacturing industries make long-term recruiting programs very difficult."

Davis said there is a shortage of skilled tradesmen and technicians in North America these days and many high-technology companies are turning to service organizations like his as the demand for technical expertise increases.

His company recruits much of its staff in England, Davis said. "There seems to be no shortage of skilled people over there."

The company has about 850 persons on staff, in offices in Toronto, Hamilton, Ottawa, Edmonton, Montreal, Chicago and Los Angeles.

"We are not a professional engineering firm working under our own auspices," Davis said. "Rather, we supply the backup technical work under the supervision of our client."

Because the company keeps an eye on the skilled labor market, it also recruits permanent employees for other companies and charges a placement fee for this service, Davis said. However, that accounts for only about five per cent of its total business.

T. E. G. International was formed in 1970, with its contract dollar value that year about $400,000, he said. Annual volume now is about $17.5 million.

The average contract period lasts about four months, Davis said. The aviation industry accounts for the bulk of the business while other clients include heavy equipment manufacturers, mining firms and power utilities.

"We're looking at technical support services for the Chinese market right now," he said. "And next week we expect to land our largest single contract to date — $8 million worth of sub-contracting services for a large United States aviation firm."

Davis is optimistic about his firm's growth potential, noting that Canadian engineers are highly regarded around the world and that this expertise is leading to more international work.

"In fact, about 75 per cent of our work is for clients who are engaged in foreign projects. And with the reduction in the value of the Canadian dollar, our technical know-how seems all that more attractive."

Mortgage Defaults On the Increase

TORONTO (CP) — Many Canadians are falling behind in their mortgage payments or simply walking away from their commitments, say experts in the field.

"People in some areas are not in a position to sell their homes and pay the real estate commission and the legal fees and realize a profit from when they bought," Reginald Ryan, president of Mortgage Insurance Co. of Canada, said in an interview.

"The boom in the mid-1970s left lenders' collection organizations sort of rusty. They were not equipped to deal with the rise in defaults."

Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. has reported that almost one per cent of all mortgage holders were in default in late 1978. The percentage of mortgage loans behind three months or more in the fourth quarter of the year was .99, up from .67 per cent in the same period of 1977.

The lack of construction and an over-supply of money for lending added to the problems of unemployment and rising energy prices have created difficulties in meeting payments.

"There's no question that there has been pressure to get money working," said Peter Carter, general manager of mortgages for the Royal Bank of Canada. "So far, there has been too much money chasing to few projects, so some of (the lenders) have lowered their standards."

Volvo Ups Production

HALIFAX (CP) — The Volvo Canada Ltd. automobile assembly plant here will increase production by 2,000 cars a year beginning with the 1980 models in September, the company announced Thursday.

The expansion will add 35 new jobs to the plant's current work force of 165.

Volvo has been assembling automobiles here since 1963 from parts manufactured in its home country, Sweden.

Top Choral Performance Wins Acclaim

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

What was undoubtedly one of the top choral performances of the year took place Saturday with the Victoria Choral Society's spring program at Metropolitan United Church.

Dr. Bruce More conducted the big chorus and assisting artists in an outstanding concert that reflected excellent musical taste and technical skill.

The choir has been superbly trained by More, its director since 1976, and although it is designated "amateur" it would stand up very well to many professional choirs.

The featured work was Carl Orff's arrangement of liturgical-secular songs from medieval antiquity, Carmina Burana.

Performing Parts I and III and using Orff's own instrumental re-setting for two pianos and percussion, More achieved a fine blend of voices and balance with the instruments. Pianists Anthony Booker and Janet Yonge formed a splendid duo while Scott Eddlemon, Barbara Callaghan and Leslie Fiddler handled the percussion's challenging role with distinct virtuosity.

Soloists in Carmina were Victoria Music Festival Rose Bowl winner Susan Austin, who possesses a full glowing soprano voice which she uses with sensitive artistry, and Peter Bradley, a baritone of fine lyric quality.

Bach's charmingly humorous Coffee Cantata, which consists of a dialogue between father and daughter over her passion for coffee, with a narrator chipping in at appropriate moments, also featured soloists Austin and Bradley with tenor Donald Twine competently singing the role of the narrator. This was stylistically excellent, and the phrasing and vocal color were used throughout with fine interpretive effect. The harpsichord accompaniment was beautifully played by Janet Yonge.

Other works satisfactorily rounding out the program were Borodin's Polovetsian Dance and Chorus, and the Saints' Procession from Virgil Thompson's opera, Four Saints in Three Acts. Austin and Bradley were again soloists in the latter work.

The audience gave the performance two standing ovations.

Costain Adieu Full of Polish

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Favorite numbers from past shows, favorite songs he has done before and some he has not but has always felt a particular affinity for — those are the chief items among Danny Costain's Personal Belongings.

He set them forth in a nostalgic little revue which was also his farewell to the city where he grew up and first displayed his multi-faceted talent.

Don Shipley and the Belfry Theatre provided the impetus and the setting, but undoubtedly it was all over too soon — Sunday night's was the final performance — for many who might have wished to catch the show.

Supported by Belfry regular Sheila McCarthy with Ken MacDonald and Alisa Kort and special guest Bill Hosie, the revue flowed with the accustomed Belfry professional polish, contrasting moods with touches of Brel and Piaf and reflections of Charlottetown and Feux Follet.

Costain's vitality as a dancer and his impish sense of comedy are his best attributes.

He is less interesting as a singer of reflective and mood-invoking songs. There is just not enough color and substance to support such numbers and make them provocative of attention. But in belting out a song like What About Today, a song that reflects the turning-point Costain has reached in his career, he provides plenty of what it takes.

A lot of the show's vitality otherwise was due to McCarthy's choreography and performance zest, and to an excellent small orchestra led by Chris Donison at the piano.

Hosie was fine in doing what comes naturally to him, especially in one of the revue's outstanding ensemble numbers, a spirited spoon dance and song that followed one of Costain's best numbers, the Quebecois Mon Pays.

Alisa Kort's personality and subtly colored voice was an asset but the most interesting surprise of the evening was Ken MacDonald, whose emergence from his usual — and outstanding — role as designer, to be discovered as an appealing stage personality with an intriguing singing voice, was an experience we hope may be repeated at some future time.

Test Won By Duncan

The B.C. Tel team from Duncan won the Workers' Compensation Board's south Vancouver Island first aid competition in the Juan de Fuca Recreational Centre Saturday.

Four teams competed in the competition, co-ordinated by the St. John Ambulance.

The Duncan team will now take part in the provincial finals in Cranbrook June 16.

Wayne Strang is captain of the Duncan team. Other members are Gwen Smith, Ralph McDonald, Rance Butler and Ron Kelly. Harry Eaton is the coach.

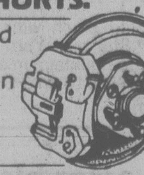
5 80 CHRYSLER PROTECTION PLAN

Ask about the new 5/80 Protection Plan Option.

SAY GOOD-BYE TO THE SHAKES.

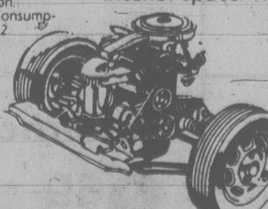
Silent shaft design (Mitsubishi engine exclusive) gives you two counter-rotating shafts to help dampen the vibrations expected of a four-cylinder engine. The silent shaft is a feature on the 2.0 ℓ engine, standard on Colt Wagon and D-50 Pickups and 2.6 ℓ engine, standard on Challenger, Sapporo and Fire Arrow.

A LITTLE SOPHISTICATION NEVER HURTS.



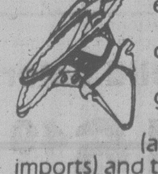
Our Challengers and Sapporos offer power disc brakes on all four wheels and a sporty five-speed transmission.

SOME UP-FRONT THINKING ON ROOM AND RIDE.



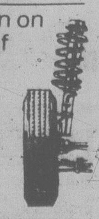
Colt Hatchbacks are front-wheel drive. The engine is placed transversely to permit more economic use of interior space. The track is wide to help manoeuvre on the corners. And we offer 13-inch wheels to help smooth your ride.

MAKING 'EM EASIER TO DRIVE.



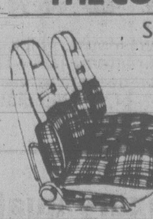
This much-desired automatic speed control option is also available when you select our Colt Wagon, Challenger or Sapporo with the optional 2.6-litre engine and automatic transmission. Standard driving equipment also includes such gems as adjustable steering column (a rarity among other imports) and trip odometer.

SUPERB HANDLING.



Independent rear suspension on Colt Hatchback is the kind of technology you find on Mercedes or BMW. In addition, MacPherson-type struts are up front on the Colt Hatchback, Challenger and Sapporo.

THE COMPLETE SEAT.



Seats on Challenger and Sapporo are orthopedic marvels. They offer lateral and adjustable lumbar support, recliner features, adjustable headrests built into seat and walk-in passenger seat "memory" adjuster feature.

LITTLE TRUCKS. BIG DIFFERENCES.

They're specially designed for Canadian-size folks and jobs. With a half-ton payload. If you'd like more, see the Sport model with an interior that looks like tomorrow's sports car. And the biggest engine in its class with its 2.6-litre four standard equipment.

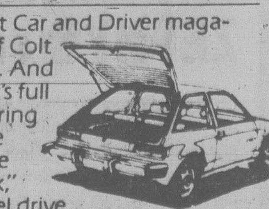
"...MORE TRICKS THAN A SWISS ARMY KNIFE."



That's what Car and Driver magazine says of Colt Hatchback. And why not. It's full of engineering and people features like "Twin-Stick," front-wheel drive and transverse engine.

TV Debate Gets Wide-Ranging Reviews

Reaction from aides to the three political leaders immediately after the debate was that each man won. They could all find reasons for being happy.

As for the three combatants, they all thought the show had been fine.

Leaving one at a time, they tossed off comments in the six feet of steps between the doors of the television station and their cars.

Trudeau, grinning broadly, said he wished the debate had been longer and that he would have liked to have had more discussion about energy.

And he said, "I think Broadbent and Clark had a good debate," which verbally echoed his visual expression of that same opinion during the actual debate, when he sat often smiling at the interchange of the other two — particularly when Broadbent had the edge.

Clark, also smiling, told the crowd of photographers and reporters at the door, "I was pleased with the debate. It provided a pretty fair assessment of the issues."

He, too, said he would have liked the opportunity to discuss more of the issues, but he said the debate "was really as long as the Canadian public could stand."

Broadbent, who moved quickly, without a pause, to his car, said it had been a good debate. Asked who he thought had won, he said, "The people will decide."

Encounter 79, carried on English-language TV stations coast-to-coast to an estimated potential audience of six million Canadians, produced plenty of hard punches but no obvious knockout.

Clark, whose initial reluctance to participate in the debate nearly forced its cancellation, was attacked by both Trudeau and Broadbent for vagueness and waffling on issues.

Clark, in turn, charged that Trudeau had presided over "11 years of turmoil" and said a vote for the NDP would be "a vote to keep in office the Trudeau government."

Standing behind see-through glass lecturns in an Ottawa TV studio, the three leaders exchanged barbs as they were led through a defence of their campaign platforms by a panel of three network newsmen: CBC's David Halton, CTV's Bruce Phillips and Global TV's Peter Desbarats.

Moderator David Johnston, principal-elect of Montreal's McGill University, cut off the leaders on several occasions to move the discussion onto new topics.

There was a sharp exchange between Trudeau and the Tory leader over how to resolve the country's perennial constitutional problems.

Clark criticized the PM for wanting to patriate the constitution from Britain unilaterally even though the provinces do not agree.

Trudeau countered that Ontario Premier William Davis, a Conservative, agreed with him and had made a similar proposal for patriation at the February constitutional conference of first ministers.

Trudeau claimed Davis's proposal had the support of several other premiers. He tauntingly challenged Clark: "What did Premier Davis say?"

Clark, who chuckled nervously, said he and Davis would have the opportunity today to set the record straight.

Trudeau then told Clark: "You talk in generalities."

At the February conference, Davis called for patriation on condition that any changes in the provisions of the constitution would not be made without future agreement with the provinces on an amending formula.

Trudeau was taken to task by Clark and Broadbent for his government's economic performance during the past decade.

Clark said he would bring in reforms to Parliamentary rules that would give MPs the power they need to properly scrutinize runaway government spending.

Broadbent blamed Trudeau for the high unemployment and inflation rates and reiterated his call for a Fair Prices Commission with rollback powers. He also said the Liberal government had failed to meet promised targets for increasing Canadian control of resource industries.

Trudeau, in an exchange with Broadbent, said "something must be right in the economy" because Canada had the best new job creation record in the world — some three million jobs in the past 10 years.

The NDP leader countered that the figures did not tell the whole story because the United States, in the past two years, had created more new jobs than Canada on a percentage basis.

Clark promised Ottawa would be "much closer to a balanced budget" after four years of Tory government although he said that he could not be more specific because no one could forecast exactly how successful his stimulative moves would be.

The three leaders each made brief closing statements.

Broadbent, stating sarcastically that he was addressing people who were "still watching" the debate, accused Trudeau and Clark of trading "personal abuse" and ignoring the economic issues. The NDP leader took special aim at Clark, saying: "He clearly wants to be prime minister" — but he said Clark had left him with no clear "perception" of the kind of Canada he wants to buld.

Trudeau, in his summing up, hit Clark and Broadbent for wanting to increase the federal deficit, saying it would further spur inflation. He again accused Clark of fuzziness on the issues. He described the Liberals as "standing between the parties of Big Labor and Big Business."

Clark said it was time for a "new team of Canadians" to lead the nation, it was time to "restore once again some sense of this (national) community working again." He charged that Trudeau had failed to provide this sense of harmony and described as "a crime" the government's failure to better develop domestic natural resources to reduce reliance on imported energy.

Children Killed Over Uniforms

The next day, Bokassa, the self-styled "father and protector of the children" of the country, announced he was going to free those still in custody.

"It appears that in fact some were released," Amnesty said.

Amnesty said it has sent a telegram of protest to Bokassa and has brought the case before the secretariat of the International Year of the Child.

The country, a landlocked nation in the heart of the African continent, gained independence from France in August 1960, when it became known as the Central African Republic. Before that it was a known as the Ubangi-Shari territory in colonial French Equatorial Africa.

Abacus In Tangle

Bank and company officials met today in Vancouver in a bid to untangle the financial affairs of troubled Abucus Cities Ltd., a development company which owns Market Square and several other Victoria properties.

On the agenda was a discussion of the action by the Bank of Montreal Friday appointing a manager-receiver in connection with a $521,000 loan to Abacus.

Senior officials of the firm said the financial status of the company is not clear at the moment and they hoped to receive addition information from the Vancouver meeting.

Earlier, the company received a warning from its auditor, MacGillivray and Co., that it would have to obtain funds quickly through its operations or through borrowing if it was going to succeed in meeting its commitments.

The auditor said there were some debt payments in arrears.

Watson family home dates to 1903 and was once a North Sea fish boat

Sea-Strolling Family Back in Victoria Port

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

An aging 64-foot schooner, which began her seagoing career in 1903 as a North Sea fishing ketch, has arrived in Victoria after a journey that began June 10, 1978 in Denmark.

Aboard Providence were her owners, Peter and Barbara Watson, and their two children, Jada-Lee, 7, and her brother Adam, 5.

The Watson children could well be the modern version of Charles' Kingsleys "water babies". The Watsons have lived on boats for 12 years. As Mrs. Watson puts it, "They (the children) went straight aboard from the maternity ward."

The family left Victoria in the 40-foot ketch Rahnghild on the 1975 Labor Day weekend, wandering the oceans of the world in her until they reached San Diego on their way home.

There, they were offered a good deal on the ketch, one they couldn't refuse. Besides, Mrs. Watson had decided they needed a bigger "two-bedroom" boat. They sold her and for the first time in years were shore-stranded.

Then they heard of Providence and headed for Denmark.

When they first saw her at Fredickshavn she had no name, just a number. Until 1942 she had earned her living fishing under sail with no engine.

In 1942 she had been commandeered by the Danish navy and converted into a patrol boat. Her large hold for fish amidships was fitted out with eight berths and a large table for the naval crew. An engine was installed.

Watson, who earns the family's keep in between seagoing spells by fixing boats, saw that in spite of her age Providence, with her three-inch oak planking, still had plenty of seatime in her. The Watsons had found their two-bedroom home.

Watson decided to convert her from ketch to schooner rig.

Leaving Denmark, the Watsons first headed for Germany and then spent a leisurely three months on the Medway River in Britain before continuing their sea-strolling.

For easier sail-handling during the 27 days Providence took to cross the Atlantic Watson made a jury rig, relying mainly on one large sail.

"We set the sails and didn't adjust them for the whole trip," he says.

In spite of the fact Providence weighs around 50 tons, Watson says the jury rig allowed her to make good time, even under light winds.

The Watsons had left Jamaica six weeks before they arrived in Victoria, as an example, and the leg up from San Diego was done in seven days.

The Watsons made headlines in August, 1976, when it was reported they had been hassled by the Cuban coast guard when they put into Cuba.

Aboard Rahnghild's successor, Watson told the true story.

He and his family spent four days in Cuba, sailing into port with a huge Maple Leaf flying.

The crew of the gunboat, however, didn't recognize the flag but the Watsons were able to convince them they were Canadians.

At first the Cubans weren't too sure what to do. They left a young seaman, armed with a gun, to stand guard. When night came he became tired and decided to sleep.

"He didn't know what to do with the gun. I told him to give it to Barbara and she put it in the bunk," Watson recalls.

Contrary to the newspaper reports, Watson says the Cuban community couldn't do enough for them once they were accepted. During their entire stay shopkeepers supplied them with food and refused to take any money.

Mrs. Watson has acted as school teacher for the two children during their world wanderings. Now they will get their first glimpse of a classroom.

Watson, who worked on the Robertson II before they set sail from Victoria in Rahnghild, will go back to working on other people's boats.

And, with the proverbial tender, loving care, Providence will be given a new lease on life.

UVic Gets $36 Million

The University of Victoria has been awarded more than $36 million in grants under allocations announced today by the Universities Council of B.C.

The University of B.C., however, is to receive the biggest chunk of the $217 million set aside by the government this year for the province's three universities.

Under a formula worked out by the financial officers for the three institutions UVic is to recieve $36,871,075 while UBC gets $131,831,768 and Simon Fraser University gets $48,522,954.

Although UVic's grant is the smallest in total, on a comparative basis it is the second largest, with SFU getting the highest amount and UBC the least.

The funds include extra discretionary funds to be used by the universities in areas where unusual inflationary cost increases or declining value of the Canadian dollar have harmed university programs.

Awarded on the basis of the formula, those funds amount to $5.6 million for UBC, $2.1 million for Simon Fraser and $1.5 million for Victoria.

The awards also include $477,542 for developing programs and $1.05 million for programs of distinction.

Mayor Raps Ratepayers Over Broadmead Planning

Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier said today Broadmead Ratepayers Association shouldn't interfere with the work of the Advisory Planning Commission.

"I hold the view they the APC should not be subjected to pressures and representations by neighborhood organizations," Couvelier said.

He was responding to a charge by the ratepayers association that a Saanich bylaw allowing the APC to discuss rezoning applications in private before they are examined by council contradicts the Municipal Act.

The procedure is unfair because the APC meets in camera and hears only one side of the issue, according to Bill Neilson, vice-chairman of the association.

Its recommendations carry "considerable weight" with council during the planning process, Neilson said.

Couvelier said the meetings are held in private so the APC can make its recommendations without being influenced by the politics of a decision.

Arguing the legality of APC discussions of rezoning issues is an "academic question that could be debated for months," Couvelier said.

He said council traditionally lets the APC submit its opinion about the land use of a piece of property before discussing an application.

"I'm damned annoyed at these suspicious types who labor under the delusion we are trying to hide things from the public."

According to Neilson, the ratepayers association believes the APC doesn't have legal right to handle rezoning issues unless they are handled first by council.

The APC is set to discuss Thursday a rezoning application by The Bay and Broadmead Farms Ltd. to build a large shopping complex on 35 acres of residentially-zoned land east of the Pat Bay Highway between Royal Oak Drive and Royal Oak Avenue.

Couvelier objected to the ratepayers suggestion all discussion on the development proposal be put off for at least a month.

"That kind of procrastination in my view should not happen at the bureaucratic level, it should happen at the political level," he said.

The ratepayers are calling for a municipal staff report on the retail shopping needs of the area for the next 20 years before a rezoning application for the proposed Broadmead Villiage shopping centre is considered.

Disclosure should include all professional staff evaluations of the project's impact on municipal services and the environment, says Neilson, a University of Victoria law teacher.

Abattoir Given Funding

A new abattoir in Greater Victoria is among a number of B.C. projects receiving more than $1.4 million in funds under the Agriculture and Rural Development Subsidiary Agreement (ARDSA).

Approval of the funding has been announced by Marcel Lessard, federal minister of the department of regional economic expansion (DREE) and provincial Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford. Both governments will share costs equally.

The abattoir is planned for the site previously occupied by Maplewood Meats. Victoria Farm Meat Services Ltd. of Metchosin will receive $46,425 under the ARDSA agreement. Total cost of the project is estimated at $158,700.

The abattoir will provide local producers with custom slaughter, cutting and meatwrapping facilities.

Owner Dwayne Nikkels plans to rennovate existing buildings and construct facilites to meet federal government guidelines for full meat inspection.

By qualifying for full federal meat inspection, the plant will create a larger market potential for its products. The annual potential livestock population on southern Vancouver Island is about 6,000 cattle, 2,000 pigs and 7,000 sheep.

Smith Picks Up Bawlf Projects

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Newly-elected Socred MLA Brian Smith said today he and fellow Socred Hugh Curtis rather than Victoria's two NDP MLAs will carry on the work started by defeated Deregulation Minister Sam Bawlf.

"It is difficult for opposition backbenchers to make an impact on government so I will make myself available as a spokesman for the concerns of the Victoria business community," said Smith, the new MLA for Oak Bay-Gordon Head.

He was commenting on a statement Saturday by Bawlf that his work of revitalizing the city, especially the Inner Harbor, is only half completed.

"We will continue to carry on the projects initiated by the vision of Sam Bawlf," Smith said.

Much of the work is already under way, Smith said, and there is no need to change direction.

While Victoria NDP MLAs Charles Barber and Gordon Hanson will be asked to submit their ideas, the planning and direction will come from himself and from Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis, the MLA for Saanich-The Islands.

Smith said it is likely the government will invite Bawlf to act in an advisory capacity, although the direction would have to come from whoever is appointed to head the provincial capital commission, which directs planning for the downtown area.

Bawlf served as chairman of the commission and had a government mandate to beautify the city.

Much of his effort was centred on the Inner Harbor and the plans included parks, landscaping, a promenade and a convention-cultural centre.

Smith has been a commission member for the past six years as mayor of Oak Bay.

"Part of Bawlf's vision was that the Inner Harbor should be a place that people use and not just look at. During the next two or three years there will be great changes there and most of the planning has already been carried out."

The main task of the government will be to see the projects are completed as expeditiously as possible.

Along with Curtis, who was re-elected in Saanich—The Islands, he said he will convey to the government the concerns of the whole region, especially on matters of development.

High priority must be given to Bawlf's plan for a convention centre, Smith said.

"Unemployment is high in Victoria and this could help solve the problem. The economy of Quebec City was improved significantly by construction of a convention centre there.

"We can do the same thing in Victoria."

Work on restoring the Crystal Garden will go ahead and there should be a commitment by the government to renovate St. Ann's Academy for some useful community purpose. The annex has already been made available to the Conservatory of Music and this represents at least a partial commitment by the government that the property should be used by the community.

Smith said he expects to serve out his term as mayor.

He has been dividing his time between the mayorality and his law practice for the past six years.

"I don't expect I will be practising much law in the next few months but I feel a responsibility to complete the work I have been elected to do."

A session of the legislature could come as early as June and, if the load gets heavy, Smith would turn the direction of Oak Bay over to Ald. Doug Watts, the acting mayor, at least until the workload eased.

"I don't think anyone would appreciate it if I resigned as mayor and we had to have a municipal byelection on top of a provincial and federal election.

"Fortunately I have an experienced council that is working harmoniously and they should be able to carry on when I am away."

Smith said there are a number of municipal projects he would like to complete before his mayority term expires in mid-November. After that he would become a full-time MLA and would open a constituency office.

Grant Boost Official

Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm has instructed municipal governments to add the promised $100 increase in homeowner grants to this year's tax notices.

Councils had been holding off issuing the current tax forms until the ministry officially declared the promised increase.

By law tax forms must carry all information on provincial rebates before they can be sent out.

Duty Break For U.S. Visitors

Victoria's tourist industry got a boost today with the announcement that the U.S. customs office has increased the value of goods Americans can take home duty-free.

The new limits: Visitors staying less than 48 hours can take home $25 worth of goods each, up from $10. After 48 hours it becomes $300 per person, up from $100.

In addition, families can pool their duty-free exemptions.

This means a family of four can take home $1,200 worth of goods duty free, if they stay more than 48 hours.

"This is great news for our tourist industry," Victoria Chamber of Commerce manager Brian Small said.

"Now we must get merchants to spread the word. Many Americans will not be aware of this greatly increased exemption."

Information on the changes came from the U.S. customs office and was relayed to Victoria by the B.C. Steamship Co., which operates the Marguerite.

At Polling Station, She Has Last Word

WITH ONE ELECTION down and another to go, the process of getting out the vote does seem to be moving along very nicely. For this, credit neither some cloud-capped intellectual in Ottawa nor a battery of supercomputers. The honor goes to your neighbor, the woman next door.

She is a deputy returning officer — one of the not-too-many who responded when the call went out a few weeks ago.

While her commission lasts, which will be until the final vote is in, she's a sworn and deputized agent of the Crown. At the polling station on election day, what she says goes. She is organizer, adviser, arbiter and judge, and if you get out of line in her territory, she can appoint a special constable to arrest you quick as scat.

Her knowledge of voting procedure, acquired under forced draught, is well-nigh encyclopedic. To support her she has among the voluminous literature loaded upon her a formidable set of rules which cover virtually every contingency.

Then, plunk in the middle of the voting day rush-hour, a new problem presents itself.

Here's Mr. Butterfingers, traipsing back empty-handed from the voting booth, with anxiety written large on his honest face. Mr. B. has managed to lose his ballot. Between the DRO's desk and the voting booth, which consists of a government-supplied cardboard screen perched on a table, his folded ballot with the candidates' names on it has just plain disappeared.

Meanwhile, other voters continue to flood in, keeping the DRO and her poll clerk plentifully busy.

All ballots must be accounted for. To lose one is a serious matter.

While checking voters' names off her list, the DRO conducts an over-the-shoulder interrogation.

Could Mr. B. have dropped his ballot on the floor?

No, says he, and he didn't leave it in the booth, either.

Well then, would he mind looking in his pockets?

Not a hope, he assures the DRO. He's already gone through them.

Yes, but would he oblige by looking again?

Mr. B. does so. Out comes the crumpled ballot, to be displayed in triumph. He takes himself off to vote. Situation saved. Crisis over, and what will be the next one?

As the husband of a deputy returning officer, I stowed away at a recent briefing of the troops.

Into a room at Campbell River's Discovery Inn crowded about 40 women from points as far distant as Heriot Bay on Quadra Island, and Sayward 50 miles up the highway. The din was deafening.

Skulking in a corner by the coffee-making apparatus, I discovered another male.

"You a DRO?" I asked him.

"Hell, no!" he said. "I'm just here with my wife."

Three hours later, the exhaustive briefing was still going on. By this time I was thoroughly wilted, but Win and the other DROs seemed fresh as daisies.

"What about scrutineers?" one of the women asked. "How do I handle them?"

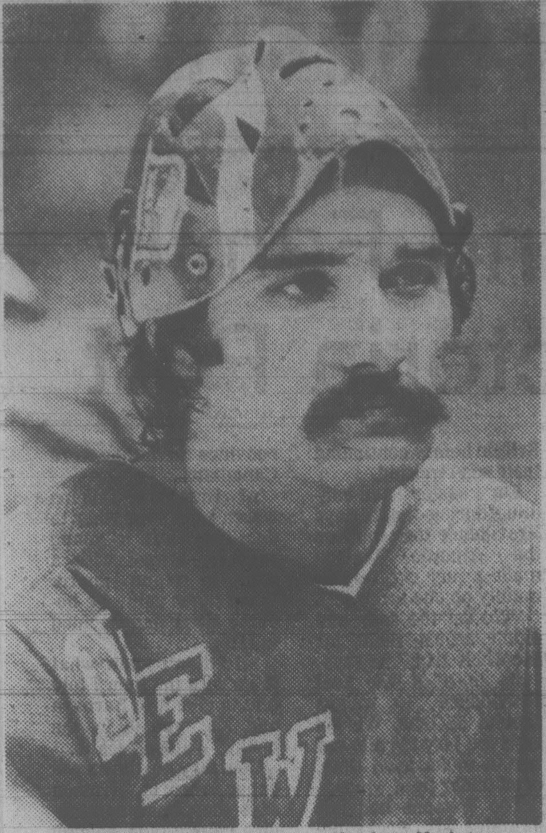
Answer: Scrutineers (agents of the candidates present to see that their interests are safeguarded) must remain back of the deputy returning officer's table. On no account may they touch a ballot, or converse with a person who yet has to vote.

"Yes," the questioner acknowledged anxiously, "but what do I do if a scrutineer gets out of line?"

The lady briefer drew herself up so that she seemed to stand taller. She looked rather like a picture of the British warrior queen, Boadicea.

"You are in charge," she said solemnly. "Remember, the authority is in your hands."

And there, with a salute to female efficiency, I suggest that it can be safely left. In fact, if it weren't for the women, I don't see how we'd get out the vote.



JOHN DAVIDSON...gets 11th playoff victory

CHAMPS IN SHAKY START

LAROCQUE REPLACES DRYDEN

Rangers Shock Canadiens

MONTREAL (CP) — Some things are good enough to be savored instead of disected, analysed and interpreted.

"You can lay back and wonder why this is happening, but this is too nice to ruin by doing something like that," said Dave Maloney of New York Rangers after their 4-1 triumph Sunday over Montreal Canadiens in the first game of the best-of-seven Stanley Cup final.

Maloney, Steve Vickers, Ron Greschner and Phil Esposito scored the Rangers' goals as they snapped a 10-game home-ice playoff winning streak by the Canadiens, who received their goal from Guy Lafleur.

Three of the New York goals — by Vickers on a power play, by Greschner at even strength and by Esposito on another power play — were scored after Montreal attempts to clear their zone misfired.

"We could have been given assists on their first three goals," said coach Scotty Bowman of the Canadiens, who earned 25 points more than the Rangers in the National Hockey League's regular season.

"We had given up 13 goals in the last eight periods, and you can't win that way in the playoffs," noted Bowman, who suggested Michel Larocque probably will start in goal in the second game here Tuesday night.

John Davidson stopped 31 Montreal shots in backstopping the Rangers to their 11th victory in 14 playoff games this year, while Canadiens starter Ken Dryden gave way to Larocque after surrendering four goals on 13 shots through the first two periods.

Except for the 1974 playoffs, the third period constituted the only minutes since Dryden's arrival in 1971 that anyone else has guarded the Montreal goal in a post-season game.

Dryden, embroiled in a contract dispute with the club, sat out the 1973-74 season to pursue his law studies, and Larocque played all six games as the Canadiens were eliminated by the Rangers in a quarter-final series.

"They weren't bad goals — I don't know, it's hard to say," Davidson said in reply to a request for his goalie's assessment of Dryden's seemingly shaky two periods.

"It was like he didn't seem to really look for the puck, you know what I mean? They were good goals. He was trying to play them with his body, but he wasn't seeming to find them."

Davidson said that, although the Rangers didn't play as well as they did in beating New York Islanders 4-2 in their semi-final set, the Canadiens posed a bigger test than the Islanders had done in their first game, won 4-1 by the Rangers.

"I thought they came at us a little more than the Islanders did," said Davidson. "In the third period we laid back a few times and took a couple of penalties we shouldn't have — but we won. We'll play better yet. I know we will."

Anders Hedberg got in the way of a clearing pass by Canadiens defenceman Larry Robinson, slipping a goalmouth pass to Vickers on the far side of the net, and the left winger tipped the puck into the goal at 6:28 of the first period.

Greschner scored his seventh playoff goal, the eventual winner, intercepting Mario Tremblay's attempted pass to Yvon Lambert and ripping a 30-foot shot past Dryden at 14:27.

Lafleur cut the margin to 2-1 at 7:07 of the middle period, but defenceman Mike McEwen blocked another effort by Robinson to get the puck out of the Montreal zone, feeding Esposito for his power-play goal at 9:30 of the period.

Maloney's shorthanded goal at 12:32, New York's sixth of the spring, broke a record set by St. Louis Blues in 1968 and tied three times by Boston Bruins.

"I don't know if you can call it their mistakes," said Esposito of the lacklustre play by the Canadiens, who were playing without defenceman Guy Lapointe, injured in the seventh game of Montreal's semi-final series against Boston.

"I think we made them make their mistakes. Everybody keeps saying, 'Oh my, Montreal played bad and the Rangers won.' Why don't they say, 'New York played good and Montreal played bad'?

"We make a team play bad — frustrate them, make them cough of the puck once in a while, get a few breaks."

What's the Price For Bill Walton?

SAN DIEGO (AP) — By luring Bill Walton back to his home town, San Diego Clippers found the dominant centre they coveted.

Now the question looms: Will the price be Free — high-scoring guard Lloyd Free?

"I don't think we'd be so happy to give up Free," said Irv Levin, the Clippers' president, after announcing Sunday that he had signed Walton to the highest salary ever paid in the National Basketball Association.

Under NBA provisions, San Diego must compensate Portland for the loss of the six-foot-11 Walton, the three-time all-American who turned the Trail Blazers into champions in three years.

"Bill Walton is the most valuable player in the NBA, and we expect to be compensated accordingly," said Harry Glickman, the Blazers' executive vice-president and general manager.

Free was the NBA's No. 2 scorer in 1978-79, averaging 28.8 points a game for the first-year franchise.

A major stumbling block in the issue will be the broken foot Walton suffered at Portland in playoffs a year ago. It sidelined Walton this season and, to some, remains a matter of concern considering Walton's history of injuries.

"Because of the foot injury, it could be hard to decide what is fair," said the Clippers' coach Gene Shue.

That's not the only hitch for the Clippers. They have yet to work out compensation with Denver Nuggets for the late-season signing of guard Brian Taylor, who left Denver over a contract dispute.

"My guess is we'll still be working on the makeup of the team by the time training camp opens (in September)," said Shue.

Until then, the Clippers would prefer savoring their coup.

"Absolutely incredible," said Shue, who was runner-up in the NBA coach of the year voting for guiding the Clippers to 43 victories in their first season.

"Depending on the player compensation . . . we are definitely a contender," said guard Randy Smith. "I think Bill makes us into a complete team."

Appearing at a Sunday morning news conference, the 26-year-old Walton promised the Clippers would be winners immediately.

"I not only visualize a championship here, I expect it," said Walton, who said his seven-year contract means "I will be spending the rest of my career here."

Levin, who stunned the league by trading Boston Celtics' franchise for Buffalo Braves a year ago, said Walton's contract was better than the reported $800,000 a year David Thompson was making at Denver.

Walton was able to sign because his contract with Portland stipulated that after five years he was a free agent. He was Portland's No. 1 draft choice in 1974 after helping UCLA win two straight National Collegiate Athletic Association titles, and, at one point, 88 consecutive games.

Petes Take Cup; Hunter Standout

MONTREAL (CP) — Peterborough Petes won the Memorial Cup for the first time Sunday with a 2-1 victory over Brandon Wheat Kings as Bob Atwell scored the winning goal at 2:38 of overtime.

And coach Gary Green of the successful Ontario Major Junior Hockey League entry attributed the victory to the experience his players gained when they lost the top prize in Canadian junior hockey by a 7-4 margin to New Westminster Bruins of the Western Hockey League at Sudbury, Ont., last year

"We knew what to expect this year," Green said. "It was something totally new to us last year and I think the experience paid off for us late in the game here"

The teams had exchanged first-period goals, Tim Trimper scoring for Peterborough and Brian Propp for Brandon. Then the Petes pressed and pursued the Wheat Kings of the WHL relentlessly throughout the third period and the overtime, bearing out Green's assessment.

On the winning goal defenceman Larry Murphy of the Petes fired a shot from the point. But Bart Hunter, who played a sparkling game in goal for Brandon, allowed a rebound and Atwell pounced on it.

"I've dreamed of doing something like this plenty of times," Atwell said of his winning goal.

Dunc McCallum, coach of Brandon, said he thought some of his younger players were afraid to make a mistake in the tight contest and started to concentrate too much on defence in the late stages of the game.

The shots on goal bore out McCallum's premise. The Petes outshot the Wheat Kings 36-20 and, had it not been for the sterling work of Hunter, borrowed by Brandon from the WHL's Portland Winter Hawks for the week-long, double round-robin tournament, the score would have been much higher.

The only consolation Hunter could draw from the loss was that he was awarded the Stafford Smythe Trophy and a television set as the most valuable player in the tournament. He was also selected to the all-star team.

The award for the most sportsmanlike player went to Chris Halyk of the Petes.

Other members of the all-star squad were Brad McCrimmon of Brandon and Normand Rochefort of Trois-Rivieres Draveurs of the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League on defence. The centre was Laurie Boschman of Brandon, while on the left and right wings respectively were Trimper of the Petes and Ray Allison of Brandon.

Referee Jean-Guy Desrochers handed out 12 minor penalties, two misconducts and a pair of majors in the sometimes rough and chippy game.

Jets Rally

EDMONTON (CP) — Coach Tom McVie's game plan called for Winnipeg Jets to "keep it to the floor."

The Jets didn't stick to the plan for a full 60 minutes Sunday night, but they skated long and hard enough to overcome Edmonton Oilers 3-2 and grab a 2-0 lead in the World Hockey Association's best-of-seven championship series.

Winnipeg, 3-1 victors in the first game Friday night, had to come from behind twice for the victory. McVie said the Jets managed to pull off the comeback because "when we got down we didn't have anyone quitting."

The Oilers took a 1-0 lead in the second period when, to McVie's reckoning, the Jets "eased back and stopped smoking."

"When we picked up the pace things started opening up for us."

The Jets got third-period goals from Peter Sullivan, Morris Lukowich and Willy Lindstrom to extend their playoff-game winning streak to six straight. They disposed of Quebec Nordiques in four straight games in the semi-finals.

Dennis Sobchuk and Al Hamilton scored for the Oilers, who were outshot 27-21 before a crowd of 11,405.

Blair Earns a Reprieve

Paul Blair was waiting for them to start kicking dirt into his grave at the age of 35.

Cut by New York Yankees in April and resigned to a career as a high school or college baseball coach, he had given up on a major league career that had spanned 15 years.

However, Cincinnati picked him up last week and, on Sunday, he got his first National League baseball hit, a two-run homer that snapped a 1-1 tie and started the Reds to a 7-3 victory over Pittsburgh Pirates.

"This is a reprieve," Blair said. "I was dead."

Blair's homer came off right-hander John Candelaria in the sixth, and brought home Ray Knight, who had walked. Dan Driessen also hit a solo homer for the Reds in the eighth inning.

In other games, Philadelphia Phillies clobbered San Francisco Giants 12-3, Los Angeles Dodgers downed Montreal Expos 8-2, Houston Astros blanked Chicago Cubs 3-0, St. Louis Cardinals whipped Atlanta Braves 7-3 and San Diego Padres edged New York Mets 5-4 in 10 innings.

Meanwhile in the American League, Wayne Garland won his first game in more than a year, scattering seven hits over 6 1-3 innings and leading Cleveland Indians to a 3-2 victory over Minnesota Twins.

Elsewhere in the AL, New York Yankees outscored California Angels 12-10, Boston Red Sox whipped Oakland A's 8-2, Kansas City Royals hammered Chicago White Sox 14-5, Detroit Tigers defeated Milwaukee Brewers 6-2 and Toronto Blue Jays beat Texas Rangers 3-1 in the first game of a doubleheader before losing the nightcap 7-5.

Mike LaCoss, 4-0, went 6 2-3 innings for the Reds, giving up three runs, one unearned, on seven hits. Candelaria, 0-2, was the loser.

Cosmos Triumph

Cosmopolitan and Lumberworld won Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League season openers Sunday at Lambrick Park.

Cosmos topped Quadra Warehouse 8-5 and Lumberworld came out on top of a pitcher's duel to beat Capital Radiators, 5-1.

Dean Potter picked up the pitching victory for Cosmos with the relief help of Doug Bull in the seventh inning.

Paul MacLeod hit two doubles in three trips to the plate to spark Cosmos batting and Jim Hrach went two-for-four.

Rick Shenton went all the way for Lumberworld and threw a three-hitter while losing-pitcher Ross Barnett chucked a five-hitter.

Sonics Win Squeaker To Even NBA Playoff

By The Canadian Press

As Jack Sikma goes, so go Seattle SuperSonics. It's as simple as that, says teammate Fred Brown.

Sikma was in the midst of his worst shooting slump of the season and the SuperSonics had dropped three in a row to Phoenix Suns and were faced a do-or-die situation in the sixth game Sunday of their National Basketball Association semi-final series.

The 6-foot-11 centre, who had hit only 25 per cent of his shots in the four previous playoff games against the Suns, broke loose for 21 points Sunday, hitting seven of 11 attempts from the field and going 7-for-8 at the free-throw line.

At the same time, Seattle came up with 54-per-cent shooting from the field, walloping the Suns on the boards, 43-27, and picking up a 106-105 victory before a sellout crowd of 12,660 at Phoenix's Veterans Memorial Coliseum.

The victory evened the best-of-seven Western Conference final at 3-3 and sends the two teams back to Seattle's Kingdome for the finale Thursday night. The victor will meet the winner of the San Antonio Spurs-Washington Bullets Eastern Conference title series for the NBA crown.

The Bullets, defending NBA champions, also staved off elimination Sunday with a 107-103 home-court victory Sunday, which left the Spurs with a 3-2 advantage heading into Wednesday night's sixth game in San Antonio.

Gus Williams connected on 16-foot shot with 52 seconds remaining to put Seattle in front for the first time in the final period. The 6-foot-2 guard had narrowed the Phoenix lead to 105-104 with 1:22 left as he made two of three crucial free throws. The Suns turned the ball over on their next possession, setting up Williams's winning basket.

MacNeil Opens With a Bang

Times News Services

The die has been cast, and Nanaimo must be pleased with the way it fits.

Unable to come to terms with Victoria Shamrocks, Ron MacNeil has signed with Nanaimo Timbermen of the Western Lacrosse Association and the Timbermen are smiling because of it.

Most valuable player in the WLA last year, MacNeil agreed to terms with the Timbermen Saturday morning and then proceeded to score three goals and get six assists in a 15-6 victory over Vancouver Burrards that evening in Nanaimo.

It was Nanaimo's first victory. The Timbermen have tied one. It was Burrards' fourth defeat. They have won one.

Nanaimo received the right to talk to MacNeil when Bob Cool and Jim Lynch, who played for the Timbermen last year, came to Victoria.

Still to be decided is the Shamrocks' bid for Kevin Alexander of the Timbermen who has not returned to the up-island club and wishes to play for the Shamrocks.

MacNeil, who had not worked out with the club, fitted in well with the Nanaimo attack, played a regular shift on the power-play lineup and also took part in penalty killing.

Terry Bayes, who played for Duncan Village Green in the Senior B League last year, also scored three goals while Randy Noble scored two.

Other goal-getters for the Timbermen were Bob Avender, Doug Angrove, Mike Walsh, Ken King, Ron Sywak, Brian Evans and Ron Sage.

Dan Perrault and Doug Hayes each scored twice for Burrards while Bill Foote and Mike Holden scored singles.

At Coquitlam, the Adanacs handed New Westminster Salmonbellies their first defeat of the season, 17-12.

Jim Aitchison scored five goals and had three assists in Coquitlam's second win.

Close Battles at Top In National Pin Meet

There were close battles being waged for the top positions in championship events as competition resumed at Town and Country Lanes this morning in the Canadian fivepin bowling tournament.

Edna Joy of Newfoundland had a happy day Sunday as she grabbed the lead in women's singles and Southern Ontario's Jim Fedorenko forged to the front in the men's event with a narrow, half-point lead over Kip Smith, the British Columbia representative.

In the chase for team titles, Southern Ontario held first place in the women's section and Manitoba was running out in front of the men's division. Both leaders had accumulated 25 points in Sunday's five rounds, with the Southern Ontario crew a single point ahead of the B.C. squad and the Manitobans working on a five-point bulge over Newfoundalnd.

Southern Ontario and Manitoba were also the pacesetters in the classic group, which was limited to team competition Sunday. Following four rounds, the Manitoba men had 25 points and and eight-point edge over Alberta while the Ontario ladies, with 22, topped Saskatchewan by seven on the pins-over-average scoring system being used for the classic events.

In championship competition, scoring is based on results of head-to-head clashes during double-round-robin play. Action in the three-day tournament continues today and Tuesday, with shifts from 8 a.m. until 4:30 p.m.

It is the first national championship staged by the Canadian Fivepin Bowlers' Association, which was formed last year.

Joy finished her Sunday chores with 35½ points, leading Manitoba's Debbie Clisby by two with Stella Mantach of Manitoba another half point back.

Clisby had one of Sunday's best scores, firing a 337 in her fourth game, but the highest for the ladies was the opening-round 376 rolled by B.C.'s Helen Bachman, who finished the day in fifth pace.

Doug Kachuk of Saskatchewan, six points off the pace and third on the list in men's singles, rattled the pins for a 378 in his fifth game. Smith notched a 338 in the second round and Fedorenko had a fourth-round 322 on the way to his leading total of 39½ points.

Capitals National Champions; Totems Finish in Third Position

QUEBEC CITY — Victoria "Y" Capitals captured the girls' title at the Canadian juvenile volleyball championships here Sunday.

Capitals defeated Scarborough Titans of Ontario 15-6, 12-15, 15-12 in the final while Le Phare finished third by beating Jonquiere in an all-Quebec battle.

Another Victoria team, Far West Bayou, placed 10th.

Capitals advanced to the final by defeating Combines of Nova Scotia 15-2, 15-11 and Le Phare 15-10, 6-15, 15-13 on Saturday.

Janice Paxton of Capitals was chosen as the most-valuable player in the tourney.

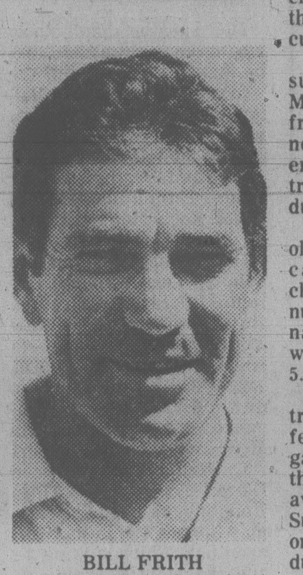
Other members of the Victoria team are Vicky Lawrie, Patti Thompson, Kelly Speak, Eveline Greene, Monica Woods, Wendy Giles, Cathy Bryon, Heather Alexander, Moira Barr, Monica Moar and Kelly Mecham.

In the boys' tourney, Victoria Far West Totems finished third with a 16-14, 15-13 victory over Scarborough while Hochelaga, Que., won the title.

Mike Piechnik of Totems was selected to the all-star team.

Mick Breezes to Title; Rands Has Poor Start

DAVE MICK
. . . retains Island title



BILL FRITH
. . . handicap champion

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Bruce Rands has enjoyed better starts in golf but Sunday's is one that he would prefer to forget.

The problems of the 28-year-old Uplands assistant professional on Victoria Golf Club's starting holes were such that both winner and loser, and everyone else, agreed the 1979 playoff for the CFAX Trophy and the Vancouver Island Open championship was settled at the beginning rather than, as customary, at the end.

The winner, for the second successive year, is Dave Mick. The golfing dentist from Colwood, also 28, harnessed Rands' early miseries and rode on to a 6 and 5 triumph in the final scheduled for 36 holes.

At the same time, 53-year-old Bill Frith of Gorge Vale captured the handicap championship in the 30th annual Island match-play tournament by defeating Colwood's Lawrie Kerr 7 and 5.

Rands, who looked extremely sharp in defeating fellow professionals Bob Hogarth and Bob Beauchemin the previous weekend, got away to a miserable start Sunday. He managed only one par, that on the sixth, during the first nine holes and was seven down.

He medalled an approximate 44, nine over par, including double bogies on the seventh and ninth holes.

"Nothing worked for Bruce," said the sympathetic Mick. "He was missing putts that he would normally make."

"The name of the game is putting," said Rands. "It should be two putts or one chip and one putt. I didn't do the job there."

It is to Rands' credit, however, that he did not collapse. He reeled off birdies on three of the next four holes, reduced the deficit to four after the 13th and proceded to make a match of it the rest of the way.

In fact, Rands out-played the defending champion over the final 22 holes required.

Mick's consistency, however, kept Rands from mounting any great comeback. Mick played solidly from tee to green but still declared his game is "not as solid as it should be. I find myself losing my concentration and tempo the odd time. Nothing serious but they are the kind of mistakes that make me work harder at getting my game into top shape."

Mick's victory marked the sixth straight success for an amateur. Overall, the amateurs have won the Island Open 16 times and pros 14 in the 30-year history of the tournament.

Frith, who moved to Victoria two years ago, made an impresssionable debut in district competition by winning the handicap honor. Once a seven handicap but now an 11, he made good use good use of the seven strokes Kerr had to concede.

In the morning round, Frith won four holes and halved another with the help of the handicap factor to bound into a four-up lead. In the afternoon, he won another and salvaged three important halves to stop Kerr, the open champion in 1956, from mounting a comeback.

Berglin's Bat Helps Telecable to Sweep

Port Angeles Telecable claimed the biggest share of points during Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League play Sunday at Central Park.

Telecable swept a doubleheader against Labatts, winning the opener 3-2 and then taking a more-decisive 6-2 decision in the second encounter.

In other games, Juan de Fuca Builders won the opener of a doubleheader against Seaboard Construction 6-5, Seaboard bounced back to take the second tussle 3-1 and K&R Sooke defeated Tally-Ho Inn, 5-2.

Catcher Bob Berglin was instrumental in both Telecable victories, driving in the deciding run in the opener with a seventh-inning single, his second in three trips to the plate. In the second game, Berglin went two-for-two, including a three-run homer in the fifth inning.

Builders won the opener when Rob Caldwell smashed a solo home run in the ninth inning and Randy Jackson struck out 14 batters, walked two and allowed only three hits while pitching Seaboard to victory in the second game.

Mike Lee sparked Sooke with a single and a two-run homer in three trips to score once and drive in three runs.

In Heywood Men's League games, Victoria Athletics scored 13-1 and 4-0 victories over Remco Office Systems and Capital Builder downed Ingraham Hotel 11-5 at Heywood Avenue Park.

Ken Gordon pitched a three-hitter for A's in the opener and Nick Nicholas pitched a two-hitter for them in the second game.

Losing Margin Too Great; Crown Eludes Canadians

SEOUL (AP) — Carol Blazejowski scored 25 points and Nancy Lieberman collected 13 as the United States won its first world women's basketball championship since 1957 by defeating previously-unbeaten Canada 77-61 Sunday in the final game.

The Americans entered the final day with a 4-1 won-lost record while the Canadians had won all five previous games and needed only to hold the U.S. winning margin down to 12 points to clinch the championship.

The United States had lost to host South Korea by 12 points in the opening game of the seven-team final round and Canada had defeated the Koreans by 13 points.

As a result of Canada's loss to the U.S. team, the host Korean team placed second after it defeated Italy 63-56. South Korea and Canada each had 5-1 records, but Canada placed third on point difference.

The Americans, silver medalists in the 1976 Montreal Olympics, opened an early 13-6 lead, and as the game progressed, there was no question about who would win — only about the winning margin.

Early in the seciond half they held a 47-33 advantage, but with four minutes to play, the margin was reduced to 71-61, despite errors and inaccurate shooting by the Canadians

With only 20 seconds remaining and the score 75-61, Canada could have cut the margin to 12 points. But Silvia Sweeney of Montreal, Canada's high-scorer with 24 points and the tourney's most-valuable player, missed the basket and the Americans grabbed the rebound.

With nine seconds left, American Tara Heiss made one of two free throws for a 76-61 lead and Blazejowski converted one of two foul shots with a second left to wrap up the victory.

In another games, Australia edged Japan 61-60 in overtime.

Australia finished the championship round with a 3-3 record, placing fourth. Italy, 2-4, was fifth; Japan, 1-5, sixth; and winless France finished seventh.

The defending champion Russians and five other Communist nations boycotted the Seoul meet, apparently for political reasons. They have no diplomatic relations with South Korea.

The United States won the first and second championships in 1953 and 1957. The Soviets won the next five consecutive championships.

A Sad Night for Day

By Canadian Press

Mick Poole had a tough night Sunday and Graham Day had a sad one.

The Portland Timbers' goalkeeper had turned aside all but one of the 25 Houston shots directed his way, only to fall victim to a miscue by one of his team-mates, which gave the Hurricane a 2-1 overtime victory in their North American Soccer League game.

Day, a Portland defender playing near his own goalline and trying to deflect a corner shot, accidentally kicked the ball into his own goal five minutes into the overtime session.

Day said he didn't know where the post was and that he kicked the ball with the wrong foot, directing the ball into the right side of the goal while Poole was trying to defend the left side.

In Sunday's only other game, Edmonton Drillers edged Rochester Lancers 2-1.

On Saturday, Fort Lauderdale Strikers walloped Toronto Blizzard 4-0, Tampa Bay Rowdies upset New York Cosmos 3-2, Minnesota Kicks whipped Los Angeles Aztecs 3-0, Seattle Sounders downed San Jose Earthquake 2-1, New England Tea Men blanked California Surf 3-0, Atlanta Chiefs downed Detroit Express 3-2, Tulsa Roughnecks nipped Memphis Rogues 1-0, Dallas Tornado beat Chicago Sting 3-2 and Washington Diplomats outlasted Philadelphia Fury 4-3.

After a scoreless first half, Houston struck quickly in the second on a goal by Juan Carlos Michia at 45:52, with assists from Dale Russell and Kyle Rote.

But Clyde Best tied it for Portland at 86:49 on a header over the outstretched fingers of Houston goalkeeper Paul Hammond — forcing the game into overtime.

The win leaves Houston in top spot in the Central Division of the American Conference with a record of 6-2 and 51 points — 14 points ahead of Chicago. Portland dropped to 3-4 and is tied for second place in the National Conference Western Division with Los Angeles.

At Edmonton, Jan Goosens's second goal of the game, with 62 seconds left, gave Edmonton the win over Rochester. Goosens was left alone at the corner of the goal on a free kick by team-mate Dwight Lodeweges and his soft shot from close range was helped into the net behind goalkeeper Shep Messing by Rochester defender David D'Erricho.

Lodeweges also assisted on Goosens's first goal in the 50th minute. It brought Edmonton back from a 1-0 half-time deficit. Pat Ercoli had scored for the Lancers after seven minutes of play, beating goalkeeper Jan Endeman after a pass from Nick Mijatovic.

Edmonton outshot Rochester 21-5, including a 16-1 margin in the second half.

The victory moved the Drillers into second place in the American Conference East, while the Lancers, who lost 1-0 in overtime to Vancouver on Friday, dropped to a 2-6 record — leaving them third in the National Conference East.

Tide Nips B.C. Side

Crimson Tide, the Vancouver Island Rugby Union representative side, edged B.C. Reps 20-19 in an exhibition match Sunday at the University of Victoria which served as a warm-up for both sides before meeting Bridgend of Wales.

The Tide will take on Bridgend at 2:30 p.m. Saturday at Royal Athletic Park while the B.C. Reps face the world-champion visitors May 22 at Burnaby's Swangard Stadium.

Ted Zinkan scored a try and Murray Allen booted a penalty goal to give Crimson Tide a 7-3 lead at half time. Robbie Greig booted a penalty goal for Reps.

In the second half of the wide-open contest, Paul Monaghan and Denny Sinnott each scored a try for Tide, Brooke Smith kicked a drop goal and Allen kicked a conversion.

Gary Hirayama, Ken Peace and Robin Russell each scored a try for B.C. after the break and Greig booted two conversions.

Selectors at the match picked three Island Union players — Ray Rogers and Gary Johnson of James Bay Athletic Association and Dwayne Van Eeuwen of Cowichan — to the B.C. side that will face Bridgend.

Three other Island players, Ron McInnes and Chuck Shergold of James Bay and Denny Smith of Oak Bay Wanderers, were chosen as reserves.

Final selections to the Tide team for the match against Bridgend will be announced later this week.

UVic Girls Top Tourney

University of Victoria was unbeaten and unscored on while winning the four-team, round-robin Greater Victoria Girls Soccer Association senior championship tournament that ended Sunday at UVic.

UVic, which now advances to the Vancouver Island championship tourney starting June 3 in Powell River, edged Lakehill 1-0 Sunday after downing Dynamos 3-0 Saturday and topping Gorge 8-0 Friday.

Ball Second In Mile Race

VANCOUVER — Garth Ball of the Victoria Flying "Y" club placed a close second to Jim Conway of Lions Gate Roadrunners in the masters' mile run Sunday at Empire Stadium.

Conway finished the race in 4:50 while Ball came in with a 4:54 clocking.

Following were Keith Mitchell of Roadrunners (5:10), John Lambeth of the "Y" (5:15) and Sverre Hietenan of Vancouver Olympic Club (5:16).

Hietenan's time was a world record in the 58-year-old group.

A total of 32 competitors took part in the event.

Wests and Athletics Gain Cup Semi-Finals

Victoria Athletics and Victoria West both advanced to the semi-finals of the Provincial Cup soccer playdowns with victories Saturday.

Athletics survived a bitter battle to upset Umberto's-Columbus, which has won the Canadian title for the past two years, 1-0 in a match played on a soggy pitch at Royal Athletic Park.

Wests advanced with a 5-2 victory over Eldorado Glenavon in one of two quarter-finals staged at Vancouver's Empire Stadium. New Westminster Blues topped Kelowna Kickers 2-0 in overtime in the other tussle and Croatia "A" dropped host Haney 2-0 in the lone Sunday match.

Athletics, the Vancouver Island Soccer League first division champions, will face Croatia and Wests will meet Blues in the semis, tentatively scheduled for May 27 in Vancouver.

The match played before about 300 fans who braved the rain at Athletic Park at times threatened to erupt into violence and tempers remained short throughout.

Playing-coach Brian Robinson fired the lone goal for Athletics on a penalty shot at the 11th minute.

Ash Douglas of Victoria was pushed in the penalty zone and Robinson made no mistake while depositing the shot behind goalkeeper Peter Greco.

From then on, it was a battle between two staunch defences.

In Vancouver, Dan Henry paved the way to victory for Wests with three goals at 56, 72 and 80 minutes. Garnet Moen, who scored at eight minutes, and Robbie Williams, who counted at 44 minutes, were the other West marksmen.

Bob Dorman (40 minutes and Don Bell (85) replied for Glenavon.

Claremont Rowers Harvest Medals

BURNABY — Every member of the Claremont High School team from Victoria won a medal at the British Columbia youth rowing championships Sunday at Burnaby Lake.

Doug Moffat staged an upset over Brentwood College, which captured the team crown, by winning the lightweight singles event with a time of six minutes, 10 seconds over 1,500 metres.

Vaughan Roberts and Vince Harrison finished first and second, respectively, in the novice singles with times of 7:24 and 7:26 over 1,500 metres.

In addition, Roberts, Harrison, Rick Goodall and Tony Theriault combined to win the boys' quad in 5:40.3 over 1,500 metres while Maeve Lydon, Kathryn Sayle, Mona McIver and Gayle Stringer won the girls' quad in 4:25.9 over 1,000 metres.

Sheelach Lean and Alex Peden finished one-two in the girls singles with times of 5:13 and 5:28.

Boxing Coach

LAKE CHARLES, La. (AP) — Pat Nappi, who coached the United States' 1976 Olympic boxing team to five gold medals at Montreal, has been named to coach the U.S. team in the Pan-American Games in Puerto Rico in July.

Post Takes Money Lead

ATLANTA (CP) — Sandra Post now knows what it takes to win in the rain.

"It was an amazing round under the circumstances," the former Ontario golfer said after fashioning a four-under-par 69 on a rain-soaked course Sunday that gave her a victory in a $100,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament and vaulted her into first place on the money list.

SANDRA POST
. . . fifth victory

"I thought a 69 would be good enough, and it was," she said. "I used to be the worst rain player because I couldn't stand changing gloves, towels, using the umbrella. It took me five or six years to get the patience."

Post won $15,000 for her two-shot triumph over Pat Bradley, and now has earned $91,758 this year to move ahead of two players who bypassed the event — Nancy Lopez and JoAnne Carner.

The 69 gave her a 54-hole total of 210, nine-under-par.

She finished in a steady drizzle that had followed a heavy shower which forced a suspension in play.

Pam Higgins, leader the first two days, collapsed on the back side after holding a one-shot edge over Post at the turn.

It was the fifth tour victory for Post, who won the LPGA championship in 1968, her rookie year.

Pat Bradley closed with a 70 for 212 and Higgins, plagued by tendinitis in both elbows, skied to a closing 75 for 215 and a three-way tie for third at 73 with veteran Clifford Ann Creed and Dot Germain.

Cathy Sherk of Port Colborne, Ont., finished 78—228. Dale Shaw of Victoria missed the 153 cut Saturday after shooting a 77 for 156.

Former 'Choker' Now Great

DALLAS (AP) — Tom Watson pocketed the $54,000 cheque that went with his third tour victory of 1979 and squirmed uncomfortably when asked if runner up Bill Rogers was right in calling him the greatest player in the game.

"When I'm striking the ball well, I feel I can win any tournament I play," said the 29-year-old Watson, who shot even-par Sunday to turn back the challenge of Rogers, Larry Nelson and Jerry Pate and win the Byron Nelson golf tournament with a 275 total, five under par.

Rogers, 27, hit the pin with "the best three-iron I ever hit" on the 18th hole and tapped in a birdie putt to tie Watson and send the tournament into sudden death.

Then Rogers chipped his third shot against the pin on No. 15, the first hole of the playoff. Watson had an uphill lie in a bunker, 90 feet from the pin on the 568-yard, par-five hole, but he had birdied the hole from almost the same position in regulation play earlier in the day.

After Rogers's shot, Watson shook his head, grinned at his rival, then grabbed a sand wedge and stepped into the trap. He blasted straight at the hole and watched as his ball died just 10 inches from the pin. He knocked in his putt, Rogers missed his four-foot birdie try, and the victory was Watson's.

Nelson, despite two late birdies, finished third at 276, four under par and one shot off the pace. Pate, who was tied for the lead until he bogeyed No. 14, bogeyed the last hole and finished two-over-par for the day and 278 for the tournament.

A few years ago, "I had the reputation as a choker," Watson said.

"The consoling factor is that I lost to the greatest player in the game," said Rogers.

Islanders Tie Burnaby Club

Goodwill Bottling Islanders of Victoria battled to a 17-17 deadlock with Burnaby Cablevision in a British Columbia Intermediate "A" Lacrosse League game Sunday in Burnaby.

Paul Pynn scored three goals, including the tying effort with about a minute left to play, to lead the Islanders, who are unbeaten with two wins and two ties.

The Islanders topped Vancouver 14-8 in a game Saturday at Pearkes Arena.

Mike Thomas, Jim Lightbody, Glen Jay and Alan Zozula each added two goals for Islanders on Sunday while singles were contributed by Will Reid, Gord Redlin, Shawn Dheensaw, Leigh Pollock, Doug Barnes and Frank Wendt.

Doug Peshner and Rick Ronning led Burnaby with four goals each.

On Saturday, Gordie Taylor and Thomas set the pace with two goals each. Single Goodwill tallies were added by Vince Cullen, Dave Carlyle, Tom Wood, Reid, Lightbody, Redlin, Dheensaw, Barnes, Wendt and Pollock.

Derek Croucher made 36 saves for the Victoria club on Sunday and Herb Isherwood blocked 38 shots Saturday.

Islanders face Esquimalt-Victoria of the junior "B" league in an exhibition game at 8 p.m. Wednesday in Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Probe at Placid

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — An independent engineer hired to review the controversial $16.5 million Olympic Fieldhouse says it will take weeks before he knows how sound the structure is.

"I'm hoping that it's a matter of weeks," said Robert Fowler, a partner in a New York engineering firm that is being paid roughly $100,000 for its probe. "We can't leave any questions unanswered and questions keep popping up."

The current controversy began in January, when allegations of serious structural flaws first surfaced in complaints by federal project monitors. It was heightened last month when two federal engineers held an unauthorized news conference to denounce 30 instances of what they labelled "shoddy" and possibly unsafe work at the fieldhouse.

Stockers Sweep Pair From Shaws

Stockers North Americans swept both ends of a rain-abbreviated Vancouver Senior "A" Women's Softball League doubleheader Saturday, dropping Vancouver Shaw Construction 10-5 in the opener and then squeaking through 4-3 in the second tussle at Central Park.

Both games went only five innings because of rain.

Debbie Derkson threw a seven-hitter to pick up the opening victory while Laury Grimston and Sandy Ferguson each had three hits in three trips to the plate, including one triple apiece, to spark the batting attack. Grimston also batted in three runs.

Kathy Hawley pitched another seven-hitter for Stockers in the second encounter while Gale Prince and Lee Wallace each went two-for-two at the plate.

Sandy Ferguson, who was two-for-three, batted in Crystal Lockyer for the winning run in the fifth inning.

Budgets End Tour On Winning Note

PHOENIX — Victoria Budgets, the Canadian senior men's softball champions, closed out their exhibition tour of Arizona with a doubleheader sweep Saturday.

Dave Wilson hurled a four-hitter as Budgets tripped Hays Trucking 6-2 in the opener. Then Mark Smith and Rob Guenther combined for a two-hitter as Budgets took the second game, 8-0.

The two victories gave Budgets a 9-3 record for their 12-game tour.

Bob Walton hit two triples and a single and scored three times in the opener while Dennis Eckert drove in two runs and John Green drove in three in the second game.

PROVES LAST YEAR'S SUCCESS NO FLUKE

Desert Ace Grabs Indy Pole

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Rick Mears has proved last year was no fluke.

Mears, a 27-year-old desert racing specialist from Bakersfield, Calif., showed the veterans a faster way around Indianapolis Motor Speedway on Sunday and won the pole position for the May 27 Indianapolis 500.

Mears started on the front row in his debut here a year ago, the first and only rookie to qualify at more than 200 miles an hour. He ran in the top five most of the race before mechanical trouble sidelined him, and he was named co-rookie of the year.

"He didn't look like a rookie today," said 44-year-old A. J. Foyt, whose run put him only sixth on the grid in quest of an unprecedented fifth Indy victory. "He's one of those guys who will be the Foyts and Unsers of the 1980s."

Mears' qualifying speed of 193.736 m.p.h., more than six m.p.h. slower than last year because of new power restrictions, ruined Tom Sneva's bid for a third straight start on the Indy pole. And Mears did it with the final run of the first day.

Two days of qualifying were sandwiched into one because of rain Saturday.

"I thought that would be too good to be true — to be the last guy out and win the pole," Mears said. "I figured that only happens in the movies."

Sneva had averaged 192.998 m.p.h. on a surprisingly strong run a few minutes earlier. Early qualifier Al Unser held the pole most of the day with his speed of 192.503 m.p.h., which ultimately was good for third best.

After that trio, there was a decisive dropoff in speed to Bobby Unser's 189.913, Gordon Johncock's 189.753 and Foyt's 189.613.

Six of the top eight qualifiers were members of the dissident Championship Auto Racing Teams group whose entries were rejected by the sanctioning United States Auto Club, then reinstated by a court decision 10 days ago. CART drivers took 13 of the top 18 spots.

"I think that's significant," Mears said. "It shows the differences in the level of competition between CART and USAC."

Mears felt it was also significant that the CART entries did so well using USAC rules. CART racing permits higher power settings.

Mears said he elected to use his 1978 model Penske chassis in this race, rather than the 1979 model his team-mate Bobby Unser chose.

Missing from the weekend's qualifiers was speedster Danny Ongais. Ongais escaped serious injury in a pulverizing practice crash late Saturday.

Ongais was due to be released today from an Indianapolis hospital, where he had been held for observation. Doctors said Ongais suffered a concussion, whiplash and bruises, but no broken bones.

He was expected back in competition in time to qualify next weekend for the $1 million race.

Spectacular Grand Prix

ZOLDER, Belgium (AP) — The Belgian Grand Prix Sunday was Formula One racing at its best, an electrifying spectacle of dramatic changes among leaders up to the final lap.

South African Jody Scheckter took the best of the six world-championship races this season, getting his first win since late 1977 and — vitally important for him — his first victory since joining the Ferrari team as No. 1 driver this year.

Ferrari has been strongly hinting that Gilles Villeneuve, the team's No. 2 who has scored two wins this year, might be given preference if Scheckter failed to perform.

The Canadian drove a brilliant race here, carving through the field from last place after an early tire change to lie third on the final lap, only to run out of gas half a mile from the flag.

But the two Ferraris had to share driving honors with Australian Ivan Jones, who took a new Williams car, in its second race, into a commanding lead after a battle with the French Ligiers and then had his battery go flat.

Twice during the race the Ligiers of Jacques Laffite and Patrick Depailler held the lead, and they even swapped it in no-holds-barred rivalry.

But Depailler slid spectacularly off into the catch fences when his tires degraded, and the same wrong tire choice made it impossible for Laffite to hold off Scheckter. Lafitte's second-place finish made him joint world championship points leader with Scheckter, both with 24, four more than Villeneuve.

Didier Pironi of France, in a Tyrell, finished third in 1:40:34.0.

ENGLAND CLIPS JAPAN

OSAKA, Japan (Reuter) — England defeated Japan 21-19 in a Rugby Union match Sunday.

Jim Caudwell Takes Feature

NANAIMO — Jim Caudwell of Victoria took the lead late in race and went on to win the 35-lap main event for super-stocks while Dave Morris of Nanaimo claimed a stock car victory over the same distance Sunday at Grandview Bowl.

Approximately 1,200 fans turned out for the season opener.

Caudwell finished about a car-length ahead of Jim Pridge of Nanaimo while Terry Forsyth of Shawnigan Lake finished third.

Victoria drivers dominated the super-stock events with Orton Ker winning the trophy dash and Craig Dyson taking the first heat. Pridge avoided a complete shutout of home-town drivers by winning the fast heat.

Morris drove a steady race to win the stock car feature while Gordie Stone of Victoria placed second and Fred Davidson of Nanaimo was third.

Results:

CANADIANS BLANKED

DUISBURG, West Germany (Reuter) — West Germany defeated Canada 3-0 in a women's field hockey exhibition Sunday.

Drizzle Washes Out Racing Meet

Automobile racing fans on the southern end of Vancouver Island will have to wait another week to get their first taste of the new class of machines at Western Speedway.

A steady drizzle Saturday night forced postponement of the inaugural "limited open" super-stock event.

It has been moved up to this coming Saturday with time trials scheduled for 7 p.m.

A demolition derby originally scheduled for Saturday will be shifted to Sunday and another demolition derby will accompany the show by Orval The Daredevil Clown on Monday.

Saanich in Front

Saanich tripped Juan de Fuca 23-18 to snap a deadlock for first place between the Hornets Peewee Football League rivals during action Saturday at Glanford Park.

In the other game, Victoria blanked Gordon Head, 18-0.

Danny Michaels scored a touchdown and kicked a field goal and conversion to lead the Saanich attack. Danny Pauluk and Kevin Otterwell counted the other majors for Saanich.

Dean McMillan scored two touchdowns and Randall Smithson added one TD for Juan de Fuca.

Neil Ford scored two TDs to lead the Victoria attack and Moki Barnett notched the other major.

Saanich now leads the league with a 5-1 record and is followed by Juan de Fuca (4-2), Gordon Head (2-4) and Victoria (1-5).

Wonderchild Has Returned To Gym Throne

COPENHAGEN (AP) — Romania's Nadia Comaneci, transformed from a wonderchild to a pretty young woman, has definitely returned to the throne of women's gymnastics. Nadia added two single-apparatus titles Saturday to the combined European championship crown she grabbed Friday.

The 17-year-old Romanian girl, grown to tower a head over her closest mini-girl rivals but trimmed to about 105 pounds, overcame a fall in the uneven bars to round out her triumph here with a floor exercise routine that pointed towards a new style she promised to have fully-developed for next year's Olympic Games in Moscow.

It was not the same Nadia who, at the age of 14, scored seven flawless marks at the Montreal Olympics. Nor was it the same Nadia who, at Strasbourg, France, lost her world championship after losing weight and failing to concentrate on her disciplines.

There was the old immaculate precision and timing, but also a new self-confidence and a style designed to give a new career to a matured gymnast in the fierce competition with the small, hard-faced and pig-tailed school girls who have come to dominate women's gymnastics.

After winning three out of four disciplines Friday for the over-all title, Comaneci started out strongly Saturday to win the vault, but then — apparently blinded by a photographer's flash — had a bad fall from the upper bar in the uneven bars and ended fourth.

Shaken, she made no better than third on the balance beam, her favorite event, but then came back convincingly to take the floor exercise title.

Soviet world champion Elena Mukhina, 18, who was relegated to a humiliating over-all fourth, took the title in the uneven bars, and Natalia Shaposhnikova, a 17-year-old with a daredevil style of her own, triumphed on the balance beam with perhaps the most stunning performance of the championships.

Comaneci said that it was definitely a flash that made her miss a somersault in the uneven bars and that the interval between events was too short for her to regain her composure.

"Even so, some of the things I now do are so new and difficult that I still do them best when Bela Karoli, my coach, is at my side," she said, adding that she expected to have polished the new routine — including consecutive flipflaps — in time for the world championships at Dallas, Tex., in December.

Peter's Medals Proof of Talent

VANCOUVER (CP) — Peter Szmidt of Pointe Claire, Que., proved that his reputation as Canada's best male freestyle swimmer is deseerved by winning his third and fourth gold medals on the final night of the three day Canada Cup swim meet Sunday.

The 18-year-old junior college student came from behind to win the 1,500 and 100-metre freestyle events, adding to victories Saturday and Friday in the 200 and 100-metre events.

Szmidt's triumphs Sunday were exciting. He nipped Art Griffith of Mission Viejo, Calif., by 4-100ths of a second in the 100-metre final and had a margin of 24-100ths over James Lorys of Tacoma, Wash., in the 1,500.

The winning times were 54.02 seconds in the 100 metre and 16:03.14 in the 1,500-metre event.

Dutch freestyle star Enith Brigitha also took her fourth and fifth trips to the victory podium.

Winner of the 50 and 200-metre events, Brigitha, 23, won her third individual gold in the 100-metre freestyle Sunday nght. She also was a member of the Dutch quartets that scored victories in the 800-metre freestyle and 400-metre individual medley relays.

Brigitha, who is retiring from competitive swimming at the end of this season, helped the five-member Dutch women's team win six gold, three silver and four bronze medals.

The meet prdouced only one record, when Brigitha and her mates lowered their own national record to 8:41.39 in the 800-metre freestyle relay Saturday night.

The host Canadian Dolphins swim club of Vancouver won the team points race with 891, followed by New Westminster, B.C., Hyacks with 685 and Mission Viejo, Calif., Nadadores with 546 points.

Linda Jezek of Mission Viejo, won her second gold medal in the 200-metre backstroke Sunday with a time of 2:20.23, well off her world mark of 2:11.93 established last year in Berlin.

Her time reflected the relatively slow performances at this meet, one of the first long-course competitions of the season.

A fourth Canada Cup event is scheduled for Etobicoke, Ont. in late June. However, many of the top swimmers here will miss the event while competing at the Pan-American Games in San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Big Charge by 'General' Captures Province 'Cap

Times News Services

Five Star General won for the first time since capturing the British Columbia Derby last September by coming from last place Saturday to take the $16,550 Province Handicap at Exhibition Park in Vancouver.

Five Star General, which caught Ray's Pride in the back stretch and won by a length, covered the mile and 1-16th in 1:43.4.

Smiley's Dream, paired in the wagering with Five Star General as part of the Victoria stable owned by the Jawl brothers, finished third after setting a fast early pace.

The entry, strongly favored by the crowd of 9,101, paid $3.20 $2.40 and $2.50. Ray's Pride paid $3.70 and $2.90.

Five Star General, a four-year-old Kentucky bred colt, provided jockey Andy Smith with his 46th stakes winner at Exhibition Park. He is second on the all-time list to Basil Frazier, who has 67.

On United States track Saturday it was generally a day for longshots in featured thoroughbred races, although Canadian jockey Sandy Hawley kept the backers of favorites happy with a victory in California.

The Very One, the only filly in a field of eight turf runners, overtook That's a Nice for a length decision in the 78th running of the $112,300 Dixie Handicap at Pimlico race course in Baltimore. The winner paid $29, $12.40 and $5.80 after running the the 1½-mile turf race in 2:28 2-5 and earning $72,995.

Hawley rode Johnny's Image to a two-length victory in the $55,350 Lakeside Handicap at Hollywood Park in Inglewood, Calif.

Johnny's Image, carrying 120 pounds, covered 1⅛ miles on turf in the course-record time of 1:46 and paid $5.20, $3 and $2.60. The victory was worth $32,850.

Star Spangled, the second-favorite under top weight of 122 pounds including jockey Laffit Pincay, finished second by three lengths and Singular was third.

At Chicago, Once Over Lightly, a 30-1 outsider in a field of eight, charged from last place with one-half mile to go en route to victory in the $78,000 National Jockey Club Handicap at Sportsman's Park.

Czaravich, the 4-5 favorite, unleashed a powerful stretch run to overtake Instrument Landing for a three-quarter length victory in the 104th running of the $55,550 Withers Mile in the rain at Aqueduct race track in New York.

At the head of the stretch, Instrument Landing, the 2-1 second choice, held a half-length lead, but the winner of the Wood Memorial failed to withstand the stretch run of Czaravich down the middle of the track.

Strike The Main ran third in the three-year-old test, another two lengths back. Czaravich, a son of Nijinsky II and regarded as strong contender for the Belmont Stakes, the last of United States Triple Crown races, was timed in 1:35 3-5 over a good track.

More Pleasure, the longest shot in a field of seven three-year-olds, posted a three-quarter length decision over Thrice Worthy in the $25,000 Preakness Prep at Pimlico.

More Pleasure ran 1 1-16 miles in 1:43 3-5 seconds and paid $78.40, $20.20 and $6.20.

At Miami, Me Good Man took the lead on the first turn and held on to to win the $30,700 Ocala Handicap as Hialeah closed its spring meeting.

A crowd of 11,199 bet $1,407,129, giving Hialeah a total handle of $71,028,150 for its 58-day meeting. Total attendance was 522,382.

Me Good Man ran 1⅛ miles in 1:50.

Wins Irish Guineas

NEWBRIDGE, Ireland (Reuter) — Tony Murray, now based in his native Ireland after some years on the continent, continued his fine form this season with an easy win Saturday on French-owned Dickens Hill in the Irish 2,000 Guineas run over a mile at the Curragh.

Neilson Snaps Record

MODESTO, Calif. (CP) — Scott Neilson of New Westminster set a meet record with a toss of 236 feet seven inches in the hammer throw event Saturday at the California Relays track and field meet.

Neilson, who attends University of Washington, bettered the previous record of 233-2 set by Harold Connolly in 1965.

Richard Olsen of Texas-El Paso placed second with a throw of 231-0.

— FISHERIES —

The Trudeau record shows:

☐ Patrol and surveillance are inadequate.
☐ Fish landings decreased drastically between 1968 and 1974.
☐ Fish processing plants are operating well below capacity.
☐ About half of Canada's fishermen earn less than $7,500 per year.
☐ About 70% of the fish caught off Canadian shores are loaded in foreign ships.
☐ Licencing procedures have created inequities.

DON MUNRO AND THE PROGRESSIVE CONSERVATIVES WILL — ☐ Provide adequate fisheries patrols.

☐ Assist in modernizing fleet to meet the challenge of the 200 limit.
☐ Explore feasibility of offshore freezing capacity to provide year round work for shore processors.
☐ Examine all West Coast fisheries regulations with a view to ensuring an equitable share of the catch.
☐ Establish meaningful advisory councils.
☐ Appoint a Deputy Minister for each coast.

END THE TRUDEAU WASTED YEARS!

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	1 ♦	4 ♠
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead — seven of diamonds.

This remarkable deal was played in the 1978 national team of four championship in France. At the first table, South got to four spades on the bidding shown and West led a diamond. East won with the ten, continued with the ace, and next played the king of diamonds. South ruffed with the nine, overruffed by West returned a low club, taken by declarer with the ace.

South now proceeded to make four spades. He led the ace of trumps and then played a low trump to dummy's six. After cashing the ace of hearts and discarding a club, declarer continued with the queen of hearts, planning to discard if East followed low. But East covered with the king, ruffed by declarer, and South then returned to dummy with a low trump to the seven and discarded his ten of clubs on the jack of hearts, thus making the contract.

At the second table, where Dominique Pilon, an up-and-coming young star, held the West hand, four spades went down one. Again three rounds of diamonds were led, and again declarer ruffed with the nine. But here young Pilon did not overruff! Instead he discarded a heart.

Declarer naturally assumed that East had the missing K-10 of trumps. Accordingly, in an effort to avoid losing a trump trick, South played the ace and a low club at this point. He was planning to ruff a third round of clubs in dummy as soon as possible and then take the marked trump finesse.

Alas, South's plan did not succeed. East took declarer's club return with the nine and led a fourth round of diamonds. South confidently ruffed with the queen, young Pilon confidently overruffed with the king, and declarer unexpectedly went down one.

Tomorrow: A grand slam.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological forecast for Tuesday, May 15, 1979
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You get results. Past experiences blend into the present. You advance towards goals and increase security. You get family support. Morale soars as superior confides, consults and makes room for you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Accent on potential, distance, communication, spirituality. Consciousness expands — there no longer is "excuse" for self-limitation. Reach beyond current expectations. Recent social contact may add up to business success.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Breakthrough indicated — restrictions, red tape and "cranky" people no longer stand in way of progress. Accent on sources, establishing contact which increases income potential. Aquarius, Taurus, Scorpio persons figure prominently.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Emphasis on public relations, press releases, written material, ability to express and analyze. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius natives figure prominently. If alert — and a good listener — you gain information of value.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You make amends to friends, family for recent neglect, statements or actions. Harmony can replace frustration, if you so permit. Taurus, Libra Scorpio persons figure in scenario. Accent on employment, health, dependents and special services.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Aura of mystery, attractiveness, magnetism and glamour prevail. Be discreet; don't reveal all you know. Clandestine "arrangement" could be part of intriguing scenario. Pisces figures prominently — and so does the number 7.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Practical issues dominate, including financial arrangements, an "understanding" with one who is important in your life. Capricorn, Cancer individuals figure prominently. You learn lessons concerning necessities, priorities.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Accent on reaching an understanding with close neighbors, relatives. You gain access to information which aids in grasping pulse of public. Aries, Libra, Capricorn persons figure prominently. You'll be rid of burden.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Accent on new, more independent approach which adds up to more money for you. Know it, act accordingly. Dare to be different! Leo shows the way. You've been holding back — now, let go! You locate item thought to be lost or stolen.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Obtain hint from Sagittarius message. You can dispel fears, doubts. One who made promise, failed to keep it, will now make amends. Be independent, receptive. Stand tall for principles. You get new lease on life!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Joy replaces gloom. Read Sagittarius, Capricorn messages. You get information which buoys spirits. You can be more flexible, versatile — and there will be reason to celebrate. Format, manuscript or concept has been accepted!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Friends, hopes and wishes command spotlight. What had been an obstacle proves to be an asset, a stepping-stone. Aquarius, Pisces persons figure prominently. Romance, creativity, desire combine to bring aura of excitement and achievement.

IF MAY 15 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are artistic, have knack for expressing yourself; you have an affinity for luxury items, beauty and gourmet cooking. Your voice is unusual, you could have a problem with diet, a "sweet tooth." July could be your most significant month of 1979, a year highlighting new starts, more independence, the beginning of a major cycle. More love in your life — that is a significant factor, along with fresh concepts, originality, optimism, pioneering concepts and children. You are sensual, attrative and have a "beauty mark" along your neck area. A relationship is put to a serious test in June.

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"Karen, Dad?" Charlie exclaimed. "She's quite old."

Norman smiled. "Maybe you think so, but most people wouldn't," he told the boy. "Her age is only one more than three times the difference between its digits."

Ages are relative, of course. But how old was Karen?

(Answer tomorrow)

Friday's answer: Tom had made four payments, starting when the middle child was four years old.

Mr. Hunter answers all letters: ideas welcomed.

Latest Teeny-Bopper Rage Is TV's Youngest Soloist

Scott's World

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Leif Garrett, 17, is a legatee of David and Sean Cassidy, an appealing blond youngster whose recordings have captivated teeny boppers and amassed a million bucks in the process.

Leif, a clean-cut kid who has been acting since age 5, (in Bob and Carol and Ted and Alice) becomes the youngest solo performer in TV with his own hour-long special May 18. It is one of four appearances on all three networks in the span of a month.

In addition to The Leif Garrett Special, he sang on the Miss U.S.A. pageant, contested in Battle of the Network Stars and appears on this week's Bob Hope Show.

Leif reciprocated by featuring Hope on his show, along with a heavy dose of youthful hotshots, Marie Osmond, 20; Brooke Shield, 13; the Japanese Pink Lady duet (both teen-agers); and oldtimer Flip Wilson.

The Leif Garrett phenomenon has become an American culture pattern, as each succeeding juvenile generation singles out its own balladeer for superstardom and instant riches. The golden boys flash across the nation with the brilliance of comets and then fade away.

Leif would like to prolong his day in the sun.

He attracted attention several years ago in the TV series Three for the Road and gained momentum as Kristy McNichol's beau in Family.

But it wasn't until he began recording two years ago that he reached heroic proportions with the sandpile set. His albums, Leif Garrett and Feel the Need, earned platinum awards symbolic of sales of more than a million.

He recently returned from Spain where his new single, I Was Made for Dancing, is No. 1. He appeared on Spanish TV and in concert to hype sales. This summer he will embark on an 18-city tour of the United States and Canada, harvesting big bucks along the route.

Leif lives in a canyon home he recently purchased for his widowed mother and actress sister, Dawn Lyn, 16. He drives a five-year-old Porsche and hangs out with friends in his home recording studio.

He is laid back and cool, a veteran of 15 movies — Macon County Line, Walking Tall — and is nonchalant about the furor he's created. Leif dodges the drug scene. He's tried pot and and doesn't like it.

"I don't want to flaunt my success because it looks egotistical," he said. "I've been working for 12 years so I don't think I'm an overnight sensation. But my singing success did come quickly.

"You can't say my name is a household word but I hope these four TV shows will make me that. I want to appeal to all age groups; that's why I have such a range of people on my special. My real fans, though, are from 9 to 19."

If he had to choose between singing and an acting career, Leif would go with his music and guitar which he finds more exciting. He recently drew 35,000 at Houston's Astrodome. He is stimulated by live audiences.

After his tour this summer he will star in a movie especially tailored for him, about a young pop singer who falls in love with a ballerina.

Charity Keen on 'Real' Music

WINNIPEG (CP) — Rock singer Charity Brown says she wants to write more love music, but she isn't talking about soft ballads.

"There is room for anger and sorrow and pain, because those are real things. I guess reality is what I'm looking to put across.'"

Nine months ago, Charity started writing rock songs to express that spectrum of feelings because she felt restricted by her earlier Motown image.

"I was tired of being a one-hit wonder with great cover tunes. I wanted to grow."

One song which she wrote and is performing this week at a Winnipeg club is called Black Alley, a harsh, yet touching story inspired by a movie scene.

"It showed an alley full of derelicts and prostitutes. I realized there's a place like that in every city where people fight for their lives.

"Then I heard that a hooker had been murdered in an alley in Toronto and that started a brainstorm. Black Alley is a fictional street but it's a very real place in the world."

Miss Brown says punk and disco music have good points but both encourage artificial relationships.

She says the repetitive beat and flashing lights which dominate discos contribute to mindlessness.

"When I play bars where they are into loud disco, I notice there are a lot of fights and a number of loud, mouthy, crass people."

Charity says North American style punk-rock only encourages aggression and violence.

"I play high schools and I see that the kids don't interract. They act at each other. Their language is profane and they have such disrespect, not only for others but for themselves. They interpret punk as hurt thyself. What a drag."

Miss Brown started playing in Kitchener, Ont., coffee houses when she was 14.

Charity Brown expresses feelings

She became popular with her Motown cover versions, but critics said she couldn't match originals by performers like Little Eva.

"When I was into the Motown thing, people thought I was very a very shallow person and they avoided me. Now, I'm getting stronger interraction with audiences than ever before."

Charity finishes her Western Canada tour this week and returns to Toronto for a two-week holiday.

Then, she and her four-man group will start recording for an album in which "the real Charity Brown stands up at last."

UNDERSEA LIFEBOAT is unloaded in Scotland from a Lockheed C-5A Galaxy aircraft, the first time the 50-foot craft has been outside the United States. The boat was sent overseas for two-week exercise with Royal Navy submarines. A crew of four can reach a stranded submarine 5,000 feet down on the ocean floor, lock onto its escape hatch and rescue the crew 24 at a time without even getting them wet.

U.S., China Reach Trade Agreement

CANTON, China (AP) — The United States and China initialed a broad trade agreement today, and both sides hailed it as a significant step on the road to economic normalcy after a 30-year break.

Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps said the pact opened the way for the two countries to expand their trade "to its full potential."

The agreement was initialed in Canton by Mrs. Kreps in both English and Chinese. Chinese Foreign Trade Minister Li Qiang (Li Chiang) initialed the document in Peking earlier. It was flown to Canton for the ceremony.

"Today marks a major step on the way to full normalization of Sino-American economic relations," Mrs. Kreps told the ceremony at the initialing, which was toasted with champagne.

Chen Jie (Chen Chieh), China's deputy foreign trade minister, told the gathering: "I am sure the initialing of the trade agreement will have the fruitful result in the final signing of the trade accord. . . . This is an important step. I'm sure it is conducive to furthering our trade relations."

The agreement still must be signed and submitted to Congress for approval. Mrs. Kreps said she hopes that can be accomplished within the next two months, but the end of the year would be a more realistic target date.

"For 30 years the people of the United States have had little or no commercial, or other, contact with nearly one-quarter of the population of the world," she said. "Today we take a major step together in resuming the unimpaired exchange of goods and services — and therefore the exchange of experiences, ideas, and good will."

The secretary said the agreement will establish a framework for orderly trade and business and provide reciprocal most-favored-nation status.

Swap of Prisoners Set

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Vietnam has agreed officially to exchange sick and wounded prisoners of war with China, the Vietnam News Agency reported today, but major problems remained between the former allies.

In a cable to the Chinese Red Cross, Vietnamese Red Cross officials said they would show up at the frontier next Monday morning with an unspecified number of Chinese prisoners.

The cable, published by the news agency, said Vietnam would accept 100 Vietnamese prisoners captured by China during the four-week border war last February.

China suggested the exchange last week, and Vietnam's chief peace negotiator announced Saturday his government would reluctantly go along with the Chinese plan.

Both sides also agreed to discuss a general prisoner of war exchange during next week's swap of the sick and wounded. China holds about 1,600 Vietnamese pows, and Vietnam has said it has at least 240 Chinese soldiers interned.

China originally suggested next Saturday for the exchange and negotiations, but Vietnam said that "for technical reasons" it could not send its Red Cross officials until 48 hours later.

The agreement on the limited prisoner exchange appeared to ease tension between Vietnam and China slightly. Saturday's so-called peace talks between officials of the two nations reached no other agreement.

Official media continued heavy propaganda attacks on each other, and Vice-Foreign Ministers Phan Hien of Vietnam and Han Nianlong (Han Nien-lung) of China spent Saturday's negotiating session talking past each other once again.

In Bangkok, visiting U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim told Thai leaders today the conflicts in Indochina will be "chronic and enduring" because Vietnam would not agree to an international solution, a Thai spokesman said.

Waldheim and Thai Prime Minister Kriangsak held discussions on Indochina and refugee problems, official Thai government spokesman Suwit Yod-mani said.

While the two leaders were talking, a Thai nationalist group staged a protest in front of the Vietnamese embassy in Bangkok to demand that Hanoi put an end to the stream of refugees reaching Thailand.

The protest leader said the demonstration was timed to coincide with Waldheim's visit.

Soviets In Vietnam

TOKYO (UPI) — Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Kikolai P. Firyubin told Japan today that Soviet warships are using Cam Ranh Bay in southern Vietnam under a friendship and co-operation pact between the two countries, Japanese sources reported.

The sources in the foreign ministry said Firyubin made the statement during the opening session of Soviet-Japanese working-level consultations today.

They quoted Firyubin as saying the use of the Vietnamese naval base by Soviet warships is "a conduct of duty under the friendship and co-operation treaty" signed between Moscow and Hanoi in November.

'Potential Danger' In Black Terrorists

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI) — Defense Minister Hilary Squires said Sunday there are now more black guerrilla terrorists in Rhodesia than ever before and that they pose a "great potential danger."

He also admitted in a broadcast that current moves to transfer power to Prime Minister-elect Bishop Abel Muzorewa are not solving the country's problems.

Squires issued his warning one day after the two wings of the Patriotic Front guerrilla alliance led by black guerrillas Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe announced in Ethiopia that they have adopted a joint constitution and set up a joint operations command despite nearly 20 years of bitter rivalry.

Squires said that while the majority rule election and the Conservative Party victory in Britain have engendered a mood of euphoria in Rhodesia, "the public must not think that any problems have been solved."

He said the Patriotic Front has "powerful friends" within the State Department and that President Carter and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher will be under strong pressure to withhold recognition.

Squires, the top civilian official involved in the direction of the war effort, told the Rhodesian Broadcasting Corporation:

"There are more terrorists now in Rhodesia than ever before. Although the terrorists are not doing much, they pose a great potential danger and there is no room for complacency."

Lt. Gen. Peter Walls, the supreme military commander, recently put the number of guerrillas in Rhodesia at about 12,000. The Rhodesians are believed to maintain some 35,000 men under arms including reservists and auxiliary units.

Muzorewa Sunday averted a split in his United African National Council by deciding not to expel the party's first vice president, who charged the party was run by a "tribal mafia."

Muzorewa announced his decision at the end of a two-day congress of his United African National Council which Saturday voted to expel first vice-president James Chikerema.

Muzorewa said the resolution gave him freedom to oust Chikerema and those backing him, but said putting the country's welfare before personal inclination "dictated that we are at this time in need of unity as a party..."

Chikerema is one of the 51 members of the council who were elected to parliament last month in Rhodesia's first majority rule election. His defection and that of his supporters in parliament would have cost the bishop a majority in the 100-member body.

On Saturday, Chikerema stormed out of the congress and then pulled a gun on youths trying to drag him back into the hall.

Bomb Kills 2 In Israel Resort

TEL AVIV (AP) — The Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) has claimed responsibility for a bomb which exploded in a trash can in the northern Israeli resort city of Tiberias today, killing two persons and wounding 37.

Authorities said the explosive device blew up in the crowded downtown section of the popular vacation spot on the Sea of Galilee.

The town was crowded for a holiday that begins tonight.

The identities of the victims were not immediately released.

A terse statement from Yasir Arafat's PLO high command in Beirut, Lebanon, said: "The general command of the Palestinian revolution announces its responsibility for the Tiberias explosion this afternoon."

The PLO said the bombing was a reprisal for the more than 80 Palestinians and Lebanese killed in Israeli air, naval and artillery assualts on Lebanon since four Israelis died in a guerrilla raid on the summer resort town of Nahariya April 22.

The bomb went off in a sidewalk market, near a bus and taxi stand. A bus was passing by the scene when the explosion occurred, leading to initial reports that the bomb was aboard a bus.

Yugoslav Quake

BELGRADE (AP) — Another quake, measuring 4.4 on the Richter scale, rolled through the quake-stricken area of the Montenegrin coast Monday night, seismologists reported.

More damage was caused in Ulcinj, in the area of the southernmost Yugoslav coastal town and Cetinje, in the north of the stricken area which sustained heavy damage and loss of life on April 15.

Already partially destroyed buildings in previous tremors crumbled down in critical areas, but no casualties have been reported.

The Monday quake followed another strong jolt Sunday, which read five degrees on the Richter scale. The Sunday quake caused evacuation of 300 people who lived in a housing development in Kotor and damage to property, but again no injuries.

More than 1,300 after shocks have been registered in the area in the last month, a dozen of them reading around five degrees on the Richter scale.

Sentence Eased

ISTANBUL (AP) — A martial-law court sentenced a 19-year-old student to death for killing a teacher, then commuted the sentence to 13 years in prison, the government announced.

Grain Pact Crucial: FAO

MANILA (Reuter) — The UN Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) said today that unless a new grain agreement is reached soon, the world might find itself as unprepared to meet global shortages as it was five years ago when millions starved to death.

FAO Director General Eduard Saouma Saouma told delegates to the United Nations Conference on Trade and Developmment that the gap between agricultural producion and requirements is widening, especially in Africa, and the shortfall has to be offset by imports.

Calling for more help to increase agricultural production in the developing world and to provide more markets for its produce, he noted that non-oil developing countries spent $10 billion in 1976 alone on commercial food imports, or one-third of their current-account deficit.

This is the equivalent of more than 80 per cent of the official development aid they received that year.

The targets for world food security — buffer stocks to meet the dangers of crop failure — are not being met, he said.

"It was expected that the objective of food reserves could best be achieved through a new international grains arrangement. Early this year, the UN grains negotiating conference failed to agree and adjourned indefinitely.

"This means that a new global food shortage would find the international community little better prepared today than when the last crisis broke in 1973-74."

Fish Boat Owners Protest

VANCOUVER (CP) — About 80 fishing boats took to the waters of Vancouver's harbor Sunday to protest alleged mismanagement of British Columbia's fisheries and to call for the resignation of the federal fisheries' Pacific director.

The sail-in was organized by the Fishing Vessel Owners' Association of B.C., a group of independent fish boat owners.

It was not supported, however, by the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union (UFAWU), the province's largest and most powerful fishermen's group.

The protesters say mismanagement caused a shortfall of about 16,000 tons in the amount of roe herring landed during the season this spring. The association has also protested department restrictions on certain types of boats for the upcoming salmon season.

The total herring roe catch this year was 42,807 tons, down from 69,669 tons in 1978 and 81,318 in 1977. However competition between processors for part of the reduced catch pushed prices paid to fishermen to $130 million, up from $51 million in 1978 and $24 million in 1977.

An association spokesman said fishermen no longer have confidence in Dr. Wally Johnson, director-general of the federal fisheries department's Pacific region, and want him to resign.

But UFAWU president Jack Nicol said the wrath of the vessel owners was misdirected.

"The finger of blame should be pointed at Ottawa and the massive cutbacks that have left the department of fisheries understaffed and under-equipped to properly manage the herring fishery," he said in a news release.

He said the Pacific coast fishery contributes millions of dollars to federal coffers each year, yet the industry is deprived of sufficient manpower to ensure that the resource is properly utilized.

Nicol said there are too many boats chasing too few fish and criticized the vessel owners for opposing regulations that will limit seine boat activity while supporting regulations that would impair the ability of gillnetters to compete.

"Solutions to the problems will have to be found, but shooting the messenger is not a logical one."

Couple Lands in Safety After Weather Downs Plane

WHITEHORSE (CP) — A Cold Bay, Alaska, couple arrived safely in the Yukon capital Sunday after spending the night on Stevens Lake where they landed their Cessna 170 in bad weather.

An air search was initiated early Sunday after the pair failed to arrive early Sunday morning on what should have been a four-hour flight from Northway Junction, Alaska.

Pilot John Sarvis and his passenger, Jean Chambers, were spotted by search aircraft Sunday and took off shortly afterwards, arriving here in midafternoon.

They had landed on the frozen lake during bad weather Saturday night.

Crofton Lake Peoples' Pick

CROFTON (CP) — Crofton residents, who got bits of snakes, frogs and salamanders when they turned on their water taps last summer, have voted to retain Crofton Lake as their water supply.

A spokesman for North Cowichan council, which handles such matters for the Vancouver Island community, said the vote was 305 to 204 to retain the present system. An alternate system of wells had been proposed.

Kamloops CUPE Accepts Pact

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Civic employees in this southern Interior British Columbia city voted Saturday 75 per cent in favor of accepting a new two-year contract which would provide six-per-cent wage increases each year.

Bill Ferguson, business agent for the Kamloops local of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, said the contract provides no changes in the benefit package for the 350 workers.

Eleven other CUPE locals bargaining with the Okanagan Mainline Municipal Labor Relations Association earlier settled for contracts that provided a 16-per-cent increase over two years as well as improved benefits.

Interim Mayor for Vernon

VERNON (CP) — City council will appoint an interim mayor at its regular meeting Tuesday to replace Bob Neale, 54, who died Wednesday of an apparent heart attack.

An election is expected to be held in June.

Courtenay Chooses Alderman

COURTENAY (CP) — Freddy Pisto, a 52-year-old bookkeeper, was elected alderman for an 18-month term on city council in a byelection held in this Vancouver Island community Saturday.

Pisto succeeds Ross Sinclair who resigned from council earlier this year for personal reasons. He defeated two other candidates.

About 40 per cent of the 4,006 eligible voters cast ballots.

Four Die Near Hope

HOPE (CP) — Four members of a Hope family were killed Saturday when their compact station wagon crashed head-on with a recreation vehicle on the Trans-Canada Highway about 21 kilometres west of here.

RCMP identified the victims as Terence Denis Sykes, 49, his wife Frances, 35, and their two children, 11-year-old Sheryl and nine-year-old Danny.

Crofton Man Killed

KEREMEOS (CP) — Robert Dupuis, 21, of Crofton, was killed Saturday night when he was hit by a car while walking along Highway 3 near this southern Interior community.

Police said Dupuis was walking down the middle of the southbound lane when he was hit.

Wildlife Fed Officers Chosen

VERNON (CP) — Dan Santano, a 51-year-old contractor from Nakusp, has been elected to a two-year term as president of the British Columbia Wildlife Federation.

Also named to the federation executive at its annual meeting Saturday were vice-presidents Otto Anderson of Hudson Hope, and Graham Kenyon of Rossland, and treasurer John Dixon of Surrey.

Voting Interference By Minister: MDs

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dr. Alex Mandeville, president-elect of the B.C. Medical Association, criticized Health Minister Bob McClelland Saturday for interfering in a vote by the province's 3,500 doctors on a new fee structure.

McClelland told delegates attending the association's annual convention that the provincial government will not allow doctors to bill patients directly in order to gain higher payments than those offered under medicare.

He said the Social Credit government is committed to the medicare program in B.C. and will not allow doctors to threaten it.

Mandeville said McClelland's speech amounted to intimidation, in an effort to get B.C. doctors to approve the fee structure, which the association's current executive has recommended they accept. It provides for a 17.4-per-cent increase over two years.

"What he is saying is that you either accept medicare or opt out completely," Mandeville said. "And my point is that if he forces a doctor to opt out, then he's forcing that doctor to charge the patient the entire bill.

"And if the patient can't afford to, the implication is that he (McClelland) has taken medical care away from that patient."

Mandeville said he thinks the fee increase is not enough.

In his speech, McClelland said the government respects and values the role played by doctors and the help they give in developing a health-care program, but "we cannot and will not allow groups to dictate the allocation of tax funds and to endanger a vital part of the health-care machinery in this province."

Fee structures negotiated between his department and the medical profession should preclude the need for extra direct billing, he said.

9 Killed In Fiery Smash

QUESNEL, B.C. (CP) — An inquest will be held into a fiery two-vehicle collision Saturday which killed nine people, on Highway 97 about 48 kilometres south here.

Quesnel coroner James Girvin said Sunday he decided to hold an inquest after meeting with two RCMP officers who investigated the accident.

The accident occurred early Saturday morning when a car carrying six people collided with a truck carrying three people. Both vehicles burst into flame and several of the bodies were burned beyond recognition before a Quesnel fire truck arrived to put out the blaze.

The people in the car were identified as Kenneth Alexander, 18, and Marion Gentry, 17, of Hope, Susan Reierson, 17, Leslie Enns, 16, Bruce McMillan, 18, and Danny McCall, 20, all of Quesnel.

RCMP identified those in the truck as Frank Morelli, 26, of Alexandria, B.C., Robert Bent, 20, of Kersley, B.C., and Al Zehner, 24, of Mission, B.C.

Pacemaker Helps Terrier's Heart Beat

VANCOUVER (CP) — An eight-year-old Scottish terrier is having an affair of the heart with the veterinary profession.

When Sally's heart misses a beat, a pacemaker picks up the tempo.

She seems to know that she owes her regained vitality to the heart pacemaker attached to her side, in what is believed the first such surgery on an animal in Canada.

In place for nearly five months, the apparatus consists of an electrode in Sally's heart from which wires run beneath her skin to her left flank, where the box containing the battery-powered pacemaker is attached.

Although most dogs would worry away at the stitches or casts, Sally leaves the life-giving box alone.

"She seems to accept it, at least enough to leave it alone," says Ethel Masterson of the Fraser Valley community of Surrey. "Maybe they have more understanding of things like this than we do."

About three months before the operation, Ms. Masterson noticed that Sally, one of several terriers she owns, was listless and unable to take normal exercise.

Diagnosis showed that the animal had healthy heart muscles and valves, but was suffering from a congenital condition which caused the heart to miss beats. Not enough blood was pumped when the dog was active.

The ailment is rare. Most canine heart complaints cannot be corrected through an operation.

For dogs that can be helped, Ms. Masterson urges owners to invest in the pacemaker operation.

She refuses to say how much the operation cost but adds that Dr. Michael Dear, the Richmond veterinarian who performed the two-hour operation, kept the cost down as much as possible.

Dear obtained a pacemaker with an expired shelf life for humans at a cost much less than for a new one.

Ms. Masterson says that before the operation Sally could walk less than three blocks. Now she can manage eight to 10 blocks and is much happier.

"She is a lively little dog."

Dear, who specializes in canine heart cases, pioneered the use of pacemakers in dogs. He performed the world's first such operation in Pennsylvania in 1967.

He also has done other types of unusual heart surgery, including several valve-widening operations.

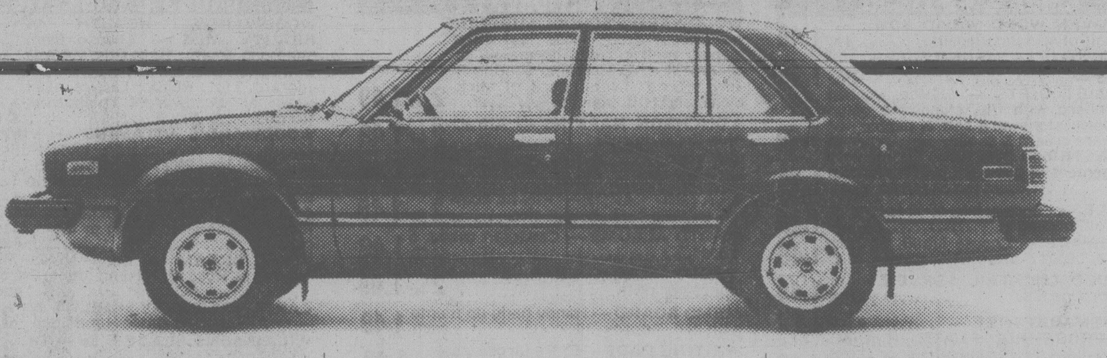
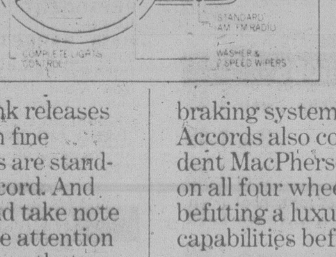
TWO LUXURY CARS THAT AREN'T OVERWEIGHT, SHORT OF BREATH AND OUT OF SHAPE.





Into the world of luxury cars that perform like marshmallows on wheels, Honda introduces a new concept: two luxury cars that perform like performance cars. The Honda Accord Hatchback and the new 4-door Honda Accord Sedan.

Such features as multi-adjustable, cloth bucket seats, AM/FM radio, tinted glass, fitted carpeting and interior hood and trunk releases are usually associated with fine luxury cars. These features are standard equipment on an Accord. And when you examine one and take note of the fit, the finish and the attention to detail, you'll have to agree that Honda Accords are built like luxury cars of the highest standards.

If the impeccable finish and the quality of the car is not enough to take your breath away, then the quality of driving one is. Because the beauty of an Accord is much more than skin deep.

Front wheel drive improves traction and control. It is, of course, standard on Accords. As is rack and pinion steering and a 5-speed transmission. And a power assisted dual-circuit braking system with front discs. The Accords also come with fully independent MacPherson Strut suspension on all four wheels. This provides a ride befitting a luxury car and handling capabilities befitting a performance car. And right in front of the driver are all the controls and instruments (see illustration) that are needed to let him know what's happening while he's driving. In total, the Accords are perhaps the best combination of luxury and performance available anywhere at anywhere near their price.

And now, is one of the best times to see them, because right now Honda is celebrating its 10th Anniversary in Canada. So you may have a chance to win a Honda mini-bike, or a Honda 10th Anniversary Civic, or an Accord or even a Honda Prelude. It's all a piece of cake. Ask your Honda dealer for details. Contest ends May 31, 1979.

RAISES: Just What Was Dagwood's Mistake?

Try to Present Airtight Case

Some DOs in asking the boss for a raise:

— Prepare a list of your duties before the interview and practice what you are going to say.

— Be able to tell the boss you are doing more than what was initially expected of you. "Employers have obligations they're trying to meet, and any employee who helps meet them is looked on more favorably," says Don Ehat, president of Organizational Development Associates, a Washington consulting firm.

— Keep a file of your good works so you are prepared to document your case.

— Pick a time for the interview when you have just completed a successful project — when "the memories of your recent victory are fresh in management's mind," writes Marcille Gray Williams, author of The Executive Woman, a Mentor paperback.

— Pick a time when the company is doing well or when the boss has had a success and feels more generous.

— Write a confidential memo to your boss outlining what you want and then follow up with a face-to-face meeting.

— Survey the market to find out what employees doing your job in other firms are paid, and use this information if the boss brings up the question of comparable salaries. "You may be worth $50,000, but if your job isn't worth $50,000 on the market, you won't get it," says Drucker.

— Show you are cost-conscious — "even if it only means saving paper clips," says Tarrant.

And some DON'Ts:

— Don't approach your boss on a hectic day when he doesn't need another problem.

— Don't say "I need a raise." "The boss doesn't give a damn what you need," says Drucker.

— Don't threaten to quit. "The employer can look you in the eye and say he hopes you do well in your next job," cautions Ehat.

— Don't argue that someone else at your level in the firm makes more money than you. Emphasize your own contributions.

By JAMES YENCKEL

WASHINGTON (WP) — The talk is of strategies, tactics, ploys. Of risks, threats, fear and courage.

It may sound like something out of a Pentagon wargaming session, but if you're considering asking for a raise, you'll have to learn to think in those terms, according to the experts.

Walking into the front office with visions of big bucks dancing in one's eyes can be as fearsome to some as making the landing at Normandy. Or maybe no one can forget Dagwood Bumstead's endless struggle to pry a few more dollars from Mr. Dithers. No one's eager to fight with the boss.

Fear in approaching the boss is understandable, says John J. Tarrant, author of How to Negotiate a Raise, but it isn't logical. "People fear rejection . . . they see a 'no' from the boss as a judgment of their worth." It's particularly hard for the "employee who is friendly with his supervisor; he doesn't want to rock the boat or make an enemy."

But remember, says Tarrant, who believes his is the only how-to book devoted entirely to advice on getting a pay raise, "The boss is your adversary . . . your opponent in a real-life game." The book, which he says sold 15,000 in hard cover, is now in a Pocket Books paperback.

Tarrant suggests two "basic ploys" to use in dealing with a hesitant boss. They are a form of "intellectual blackmail," he says:

If the boss tells you, "It's been a tough year," first get a commitment from him anyway for a raise if he could grant it. Then "use a chicken-little" approach by exaggerating your reaction.

"I didn't realize it was all that bad," you could say, implying that you might spread the word in the rest of the office. "Well," the boss should replay in this scenario, "maybe things aren't so bad after all" and open the company wallet. Tarrant says he has used this tactic and knows it works.

If the boss argues, "It's not in the budget," get the conditional agreement again and then respond with "I really thought you had more authority than that . . . can I talk to someone who has more authority?" That should loosen up the purse strings.

"Facing the boss for more money was an act of bravery for me," recalls a 33-year-old Washington lobbyist. Her courage — and tenacity — netted her four raises in 13 months, for an $8,000-a-year increase in her pay cheque.

"You've got to plan ahead," advises Miryam Drucker, director of the Washington School for Secretaries, who tells her students to "toot your own horn" if they want more money.

Many employees never face the raise problem. They get their salary increases in annual pay reviews, through union contracts or by moving up the promotion ladder, and they're content with what they get. Big-time entertainers hire agents to do the dirty work.

Often bosses — to be fair — can't come up with the raise you ask for even if they wanted to. Your firm may have a policy limiting raises, or higher authorities can turn down a supervisor's recommendation.

The lobbyist who won big discovered — and then perfected — her tactic over a 13-month period.

She had taken a pay cut when she went to work in the Washingon office of a national association, but it was a job she wanted and the raises, if not large, came regularly.

Still, after five years, she felt she was just keeping pace with the increasing cost of living and had not made any substantive salary gains. It was time, she realized, to ask for big money.

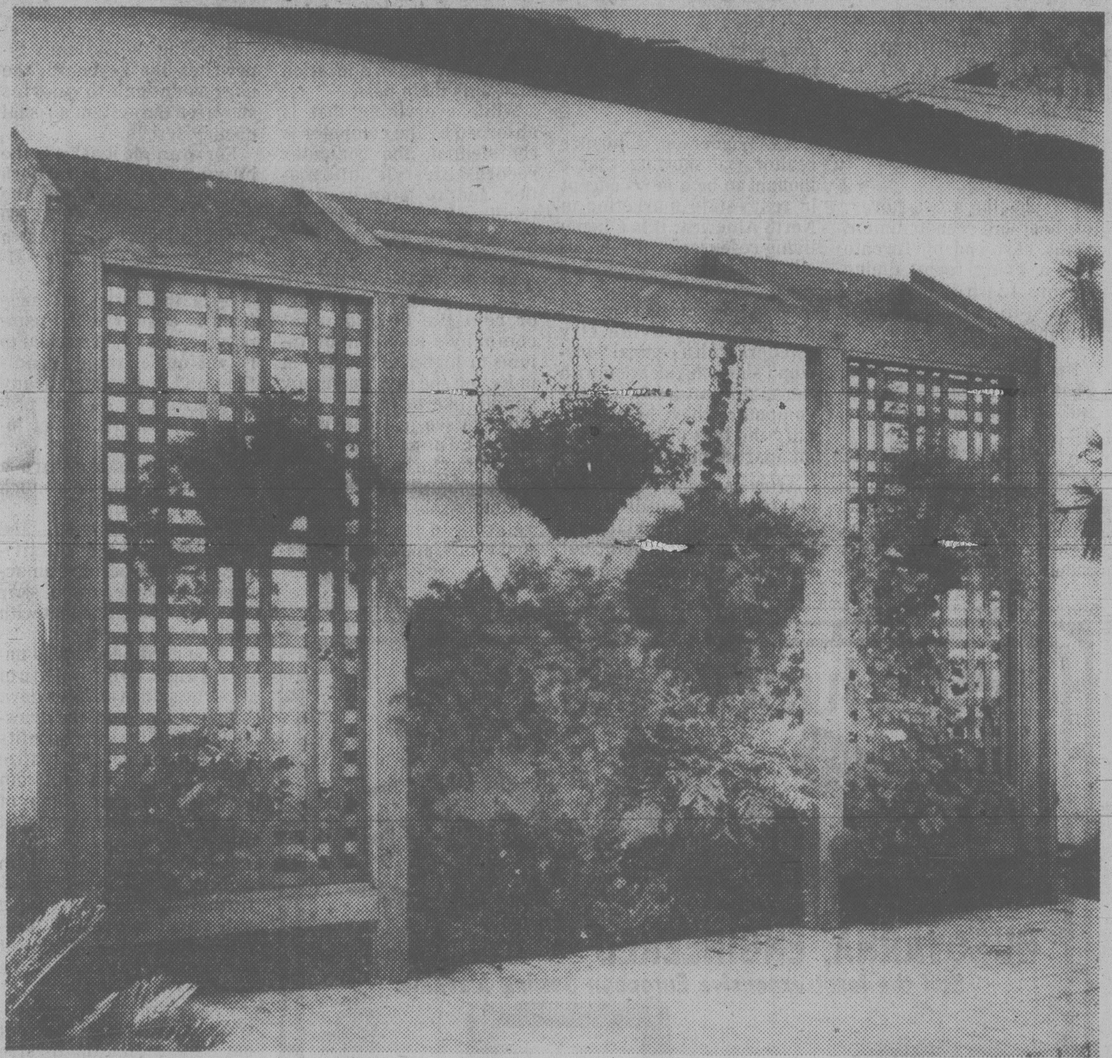
"I planned what I was going to say and I worked on it," she recalls. "There's a time when you feel you're worth more money . . . when you know it." She rehearsed her case outlining her growth with the association and headed for the boss' office.

Her first move, she said, was to make sure the boss was in a receptive mood. "Do you have the time to sit and talk?" she recalls asking, and then, she "went right into it. I essentially said I wasn't happy with my pay" while detailing her increased responsibilities. Apparently she was convincing; she got a commitment.

But when the raise — $2,500 — appeared on her pay cheque, it wasn't enough. So she marched back into the front office and asked:

"Is this it?" Suddenly her boss was on the defensive, she says, and he agreed to a six-month review. But in only three months she got another raise. "Is this it?" she asked again. "Well no, no it isn't," he replied.

Using this tactic again and then again, she received the $8,000 in raises — and a promotion. It's a story she's told to other women working their way up the pay scale. She's asked that her name not be used because she's going to go after another raise.



WHY NOT try something flexible to break up uninteresting garden expanses? This redwood beam structure makes blank wall behind it right spiffy. Hanging plants can be rotated or replaced as desired.

Great for Gardens

The walls of neighbors' houses or their garages, and sometimes your own, present a solid, unblinking expanse that dominates a garden area. Vines and trees can break up that surface, and usually are the primary choices to solve the problem, but why not try something that is more flexible, such as the structure shown here, designed by The Peridion Group.

This by itself adds design to the blank wall behind it, and even without plants is attractive. However, the basic plan calls for hanging plants which additionally screen the background and add softening greenery.

When a plant begins to turn yellow or needs attention, it is replaced by one that is healthy. Plants also can be rotated to bring in color during their blooming period.

Bolted to the wall, eight feet above the ground, a 2x12-inch beam is a main ingredient in the design. From it, and at each end, additional 2x12 beams slant downward and forward to meet 2x12 uprights, 7 feet and 4 inches high.

A 4x6-inch beam stretches across the top between the two uprights, and also rests upon vertical 4x4 posts along the front edge. These posts frame 30-inch wide panels filled with laths spaced 2 inches and 5 inches apart, and leave a 5-foot, 4-inch opening in the centre. Pots and baskets hang from a 4x4 installed along the top.

American Lass To Bite Bio-Glass

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — A young Daytona Beach woman will be the first human to receive an artificial tooth implant of "bio-glass." The operation, if successful, could eliminate dental bridgework.

Dr. Caleb King, a dental physician and clinical instructor at the University of Florida's School of Dentistry, said the operation would take place at the school "within a couple of weeks."

"I think — without knowing how she feels about it — it would be best now to leave her anonymous," said King, who has implanted "bio-glass" teeth in baboons "with a high degree of success."

"This material (bio-glass) is not inert," he said. "It actually induces the bone to be laid down on it. It literally is affixed to the jaw."

Officials of the Florida Dental Association, where King delivered a report on his research with bio-glass, said if the tooth implant is successful, it could mean the end of dental bridgework.

Bio-glass is composed of several natural chemicals found in the human body, including calcium, silicon, sodium, fluoride and oxygen. It was first used by German physicians for artificial hip joint implants.

Computers Match Income With Real Estate Dreams

By JUDY CREIGHTON

TORONTO (CP) — There's a computer in town that has just told me in seconds that I have expensive tastes but not the income to match.

'I would like a two-storey, two-bedroom condominium in the east end of Toronto with a living room, dining room, laundry room, glassed-in balcony, indoor and outdoor pool.

But the computer says that what I want will cost $84,800 and I can afford only $71,700.

Susan Wigderson, director of marketing and sales for the high-rise and residential division of Cadillac-Fairview Ltd., says that most people who "design" their dream home on the computer usually expect too much for what they can really afford.

Ms. Wigderson, a former realtor, was showing what is thought to be a new concept in real estate marketing in North America. It is a home living resource centre located in Toronto's Yorkville area.

She said that the centre is designed to provide city dwellers with a central "one-stop" shopping location with the main feature being the computer which helps simplify the task of hunting for an apartment or home.

After answering questions relating to lifestyle needs and wants and financial status, a computer print-out sheet tells prospective home buyers what kind of home they can afford in a location that suits them best.

While everything that is absorbed by the computer is confidential, the computer records lifestyle information and is later used by Cadillac-Fairview for market research, says Ms. Wigderson.

Visitors to the centre are naturally being wooed to buy or rent the development company's own condominiums or high-rise apartment units, but she says that many simply like to try the computer to see just how much they can afford when searching for a home.

The computer directs a visitor through 50 questions relating to lifestyle needs and wants, and financial status.

By using the system's typewriter-like keyboard, the user responds to queries shown on the system's visual display screen.

For example it asks: Is the buyer married? Do both spouses work? Would the buyer spend an extra $1,000 on an atrium? What down payment can the buyer afford?

Once the series of questions is answered the computer — pre-programmed to reject out-of-range conditions and thus eliminate any inconsistencies — then provides a printed sheet of information telling the user whether he can afford a home and, if so, how much he can afford to spend.

Condominium-living, the heart of the centre's activities, now has become an accepted lifestyle, says Oskar Brecher, vice-president with Cadillac-Fairview.

"You need people who understand condominium life," he said in an interview. "They must know the drawbacks as well as the benefits and obligations and realize that owning a condominium means giving up some of their freedoms to get others."

Today's condominium owners have a more sophisticated approach to living and aren't necessarily people who place their homes at the centre of their lives, he says.

"They are usually executives, many female, who eat out a lot, attend the theatre and are actively involved in their city's cultural, business and political life."

Brecher says that the advantage of condominium ownership is that occupants have some say in how the development is run, have a minimum of maintenance to worry about and above all "an equity in their home."

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: My husband is 72 and retired, but he's making a career of making my life miserable. He used to be quite the man about town. I spent many lovely evenings wondering where he was and when he'd come home.

Now, I can't get him out of the house. I actually have to look for things for him to do: "Go to the grocery store! Go to the drugstore! Go to the hardware store!"

I can hardly stand the sight of him! My stomach turns over when I hear his key in the door.

After he reads the morning paper, he follows me around supervising the cooking and housekeeping.

If a lady friend of mine comes over for a cup of tea, he horns in and monopolizes the conversation.

Dear God, I am so sick of him, death would be a welcome release!

— AGING

DEAR AGING: Yours or his? The quality of a marriage is only as good as the materials used by the builders. The "lumber of life" is caring, sharing, patience, forgiveness and understanding. One can't expect to spend his later years in a cathedral when he's accumulated only enough "lumber" for a shack.

DEAR ABBY: I was invited to the home of a married couple for dinner so I brought my hostess a bottle of expensive French wine.

She thanked me for it, then promptly put it away. Instead of serving my lovely wine with dinner, she served a domestic wine. I thought that was tacky. I was also very disappointed because, enjoying fine wines as I do, I had looked forward to having some of the wine I had brought.

According to the rules of etiquette shouldn't my hostess have served my wine?

— ISLANDER

DEAR ISLANDER: No. And don't assume that because a wine is expensive and French, it is superior to a less costly domestic wine. It ain't necessarily so, say impartial wine connoisseurs.

DEAR ABBY: I recently learned that our 22-year-old son in college is the father of a child who was given away for adoption last year. Our son did not confide in us. I found this out quite by accident.

My husband and I have always looked forward to our first grandchild and I am sick with grief to think that somewhere in this world I have a grandchild whom I will ever know. I haven't been able to bring myself to tell my husband. My question: Do I have the right to keep this from him? It's HIS grandchild, too.

— GRIEVING GRANNY

DEAR GRANNY: No good can come from telling your husband. Your grandchild is now somebody else's child and grandchild as well. Be kind and silent. And don't dwell on it. Regret is the cancer of life.

CONFIDENTIAL TO SOLLY: You've got a "gelt" complex. Don't assume that every woman who shows an interest in you is after your money — unless, of course, that's all you have to offer.

Elderly Widows Get Zapped

Leslie Holbrook

(This week, I turn my column over to another senior: Freelance writer John Duffie of Victoria.)

Life for retired Canadians, except for a fortunate minority with adequate private incomes, varies from genteel poverty to a desperate struggle to exist from one pension cheque to the next.

If you are a woman, the odds against your being financially secure are even greater than for a man. Monique Begin, minister of national health and welfare, says there are 650,000 unattached Canadians living in poverty and that three quarters of them are women. By the year 2000 there may be more than one million in this unfortunate category unless relief is forthcoming.

It is not hard to see why women suffer most. They outlive men by about seven years so their incomes are subjected to the eroding effects of inflation for that much longer. Besides, women receiving private pensions generally get much less than the men who worked alongside them because for most of their working lives they were paid less for similar work. Some companies, too, force women to retire at an earlier age thus allowing them less time to build up their entitlement.

Another flagrant injustice facing women is the fact that the work they do as homemakers is not considered "work" for purposes of the Canada Pension. A report by the Royal Commission on the Status of Women in 1970 calculated that the work done by Canadian housewives in a year had a monetary value of $8 billion or 11 per cent of the gross national product; the time spent doing housework across Canada exceeded the total of all hours spent by employees in industry.

Also, a cruel situation exists in the application of the Spouses Allowance, a grant paid to an under-65 spouse of an old age pensioner to supplement their inadequate income. In such cases, if the recipient of the pension dies, the widow or widower receives a note of condolence from the govenment, together with the unpleasant advice that the Spouses Allowance will end.

The Act was amended recently to allow for a six-months delay in cancelling the allowance following death but this does not materially improve a harsh, unfair situation.

J. N. Bentley, Superintendent of the Ontario Pension Committee, made a statement, in 1974, concerning all pensioners; it is particularly applicable to the impoverished older woman. He said:

"Society can accept responsibility for persons removed from the work force in two ways. We can say simply 'If you cannot produce neither shall you eat' or we can accept responsibility to ensure reasonable standards of living for them. We appear to accept the second as the socially acceptable one but our actions seem to belie this principle."

Older women living alone and excluded from the money-making workforce deserve fairer treatment. How this is to be accomplished should be receiving urgent consideration; it is recognized that solutions are not easy.

If you face a situation similar to those noted above tell your story to The Fourth Quarter.

Common ₵ents

By KATE MacQUEEN

Have your windows washed by professional cleaners and usually two washers show up. One reason: A storm window may be too heavy or too large for one person to handle safely. Another is that the frame may be light-weight metal that could bend out of shape, especially on a windy day. Remember that; if you don't hire professionals or do it yourself.

It could be more costly than you think to clean your draperies at a self-service cleaning centre. Draperies that have hung for at least two years without being cleaned have absorbed household gases which weaken fabric fibres. the weight of the heavy-duty solvent and cleaning agitation could split or tear the weakened fabric. Drycleaning plants usually have milder solvents for such delicate fibres.

All firewood you won't be using all summer will burn better next fall if you cover it with a tarp or heavy plastic. Otherwise, your seasoned logs will soak up moisture again. Stacking logs on some kind of runner will also keep botom logs from soaking up ground water and faster decay. Keep logs away from garage or house, because they attract termites.

Noisy Rear End Scares Driver

By MICHAEL LAMM

DEAR MIKE: My Impala wagon's rear end sounds like it's about to fall out. The mechanics tell me they can't find anything wrong. After driving a while, when I turn my front tires sharply to the left, the rear end sounds as if the gears aren't meshing properly — like the teeth are perhaps riding on top of each other. It scares me every time. Can you help? — SCARED

DEAR SCARED: It's possibly worn spider gears in your differential. Or bad bearings somewhere in the rear axle. Or loose suspension attachments. See if you can't find a new mechanic who's interested and competent.

DEAR MIKE: Two mechanics have told me that my Datsun 1200 needs a new air-conditioning compressor. Other than paying the high price the dealers charge, where can I buy a good used or rebuilt compressor, and what's a reasonable price? — HOT

DEAR HOT: Phone your local wrecking yards, especially those that specialize in imported cars. If they don't have your compressor, ask them to check other yards on their hot lines. I don't know what you consider reasonable, but mechanical parts from wrecking yards usually end up costing about half their new price.

DEAR MIKE: I own a 1975 half-ton pickup with the 454-cid V-8. The engine runs great but burns about a quart of oil every 200 miles. I've checked for leaks and have changed to a heavier oil. What makes this big engine burn oil? It has only about 60,000 miles on it. — BLUE SMOKE

DEAR BLUE: Could be that your oil seals are worn. These are rubber seals near the tops of the valve stems. They can e replaced without removing the heads. It's possible, too, that you have bad valve guides or rings — but first try replacing your seals.

You're invited to send your automotive questions to Michael Lamm, Box 7607-B, Stockton, Calif. 95207. Not all questions can be answered personally. Those of broadest reader interest will appear in future columns.

Unions Must Have Power - Parrot

CALGARY (CP) — The Canadian labor movement must reorganize itself on a national level to counteract the increasing power of employers, says the president of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers.

"If we're going to be successful in defending our rights, we must increase our power both politically and in industry," Jean-Claude Parrot told a union rally Sunday.

Parrot, who is appealing a jail sentence for defying a parliamentary back-to-work order, said the labor movement has tremendous potential, but must improve its organization and communications.

"We should find a way to make sure that any (labor) struggle, even in a small town, should be publicized enough to make sure other supporters will know what's happening."

Parrot also said the appeal of his three-month sentence, for telling postal workers to disobey Parliament during a strike last fall, is not simply a struggle against a government trying to put a union leader in jail.

"The struggle is a struggle against the attack by the federal government to take away our right to negotiate a collective agreement and to strike if we need to."

He recounted the history of bitter negotiations between the postal union and the treasury board in the last decade, accusing the employer of being determined from the beginning "to use the negotiations to take away the few rights the postal workers had fought so long to obtain."

Many studies had pointed to management as the culprit in labor-management troubles within the post office, but the government had consistently refused to have a royal commission investigate the problems.

The government has one concept of justice for postal workers and another for the RCMP, he said.

"When the RCMP open mail illegally, Pierre Trudeau and Joe Clark say they want to make it legal, but when the postal workers go on a legal strike, Trudeau responds wigh legislation to make it illegal. . . .

"Let's hope Mr. Trudeau has lots of time on his hands to contemplate justice after May 22," the date of the federal election.

Andy Stewart, president of the Public Service Alliance of Canada, also urged union members to take a more active political role. He said the government's proposed Bill C-22, affecting collective bargaining rights of federal public servants, is part of a campaign that would eventually affect all provincial public servants in the country.

"We cannot and should not be expected to remain aloof from this election. Our presence will be felt as never before."

He predicted the public service vote in some Ottawa-area ridings would determine the outcome of those contests.

If the bill, which died on the order paper of the last Parliament, is resurrected in the next session, the troubles in the post office would spread to 35 or 40 other government departments.

Union leaders say the bill would restrict bargaining rights.

Gene Mitchell, executive secretary of the Alberta Federation of Labor, said Alberta has the worst labor relations in the country.

"We can lay the blame for this right at the feet of the provincial government, with its imposition of wage controls and wage restraints."

The government's wage guidelines had influenced public-service workers and the private sector throughout the province, he said.

He also attacked the "insidious campaign" for right-to-work legislation, which he said would destroy the union movement.

The legislation would, among other things, guarantee non-union employees the same rights as union members within the same country.

The union rally, competing with Mother's Day and televised Stanley Cup finals, attracted about 100 supporters.

Ex-MP Heads Independents

OTTAWA (CP) — Max Saltsman is the new head of the Committee for an Independent Canada and says he is ready to speak out on all issues.

Saltsman
. . . I'm controversial

His appointment was made during the weekend and the former New Democratic finance critic in Parliament immediately went on the attack.

"I think the committee is looking to establish a higher profile and (more) controversial image across the country," he said in an interview.

"I guess that was a major reason for my selection as chairman — I'm controversial, high profile and I'll speak out on anything if I think it will help Canadians.

"Many of the 2,000 or so members of the committee have a political affiliation, but we will...work with any party which has the best interests of Canada in mind."

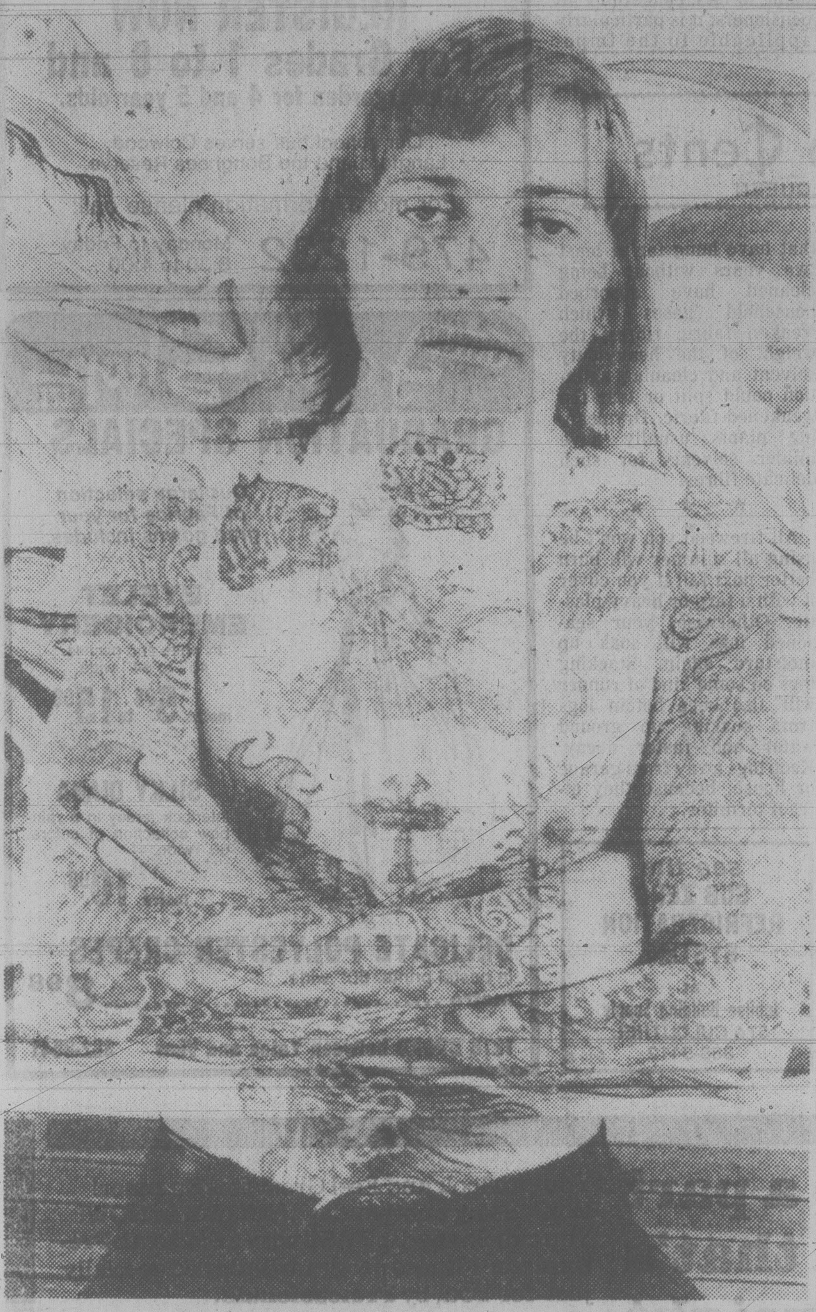
Saltzman is not running for re-election May 22 after representing the Ontario riding of Waterloo-Cambridge since he won a byelection in November, 1964.

Saltsman said the committee so far has concentrated on foreign ownership issues, but now will move into such issues as employment, banking and the preservation of Canadian culture and institutions.

"I think it is very important that we demonstrate we can create and maintain the Canadian culture and its institutions.

"The tendency is usually for the small to get swallowed up by the big. In this case the U.S. swallowing up Canada. We must fight to prevent this.

"The American way of life might be good for Americans, but it is not good for Canadians."



TATTOO ARTIST Paul Areteau is a walking art gallery who carries his work on his body from his neck to his toes. Arteau is having an exhibition until the end of May at a Toronto gallery showing tattoo designs, some punk-rock poems and his own tattooed self.

Union Wants New Inco Negotiations

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — Union negotiators and provincial mediators said they were looking at the possibility of resuming negotiations after striking workers at Inco Metals Co. voted against a proposed contract settlement.

Negotiators for Local 6500, United Steelworkers of America, planned to get in touch with provincial mediators today to see whether Inco was willing to resume negotiations, Gilbert Gilchrist, the union's chief negotiator, said Sunday.

And Victor Pathe, provincial government mediator, said he would speak to the company and the union and would hold a meeting today with Robert Elgie, Ontario labor minister, to discuss a return to the bargaining table.

Meanwhile, thousands of Sudbury families, living on an average of $33 a week, were preparing for more lean times as the Inco strike continued. It started last Sept. 15.

A majority of the bargaining committee recommended acceptance of the Inco offer when it was negotiated last week. Striking workers, however, voted 57 per cent against it Saturday.

David Patterson, Local 6500 president, said the union members' rejection showed Inco that the offer wasn't high enough — "the same thing we tried to tell the company a long time ago."

But he had recommended they accept it because he thought "that was the most we could get at that time."

Basic pay at Inco before the 11,700 workers walked off their jobs Sept.15 was $6 an hour, plus a 79-cent-an-hour cost-of-living bonus. The offer called for an immediate across-the-board increase of 51 cents an hour and 10-cent-an-hour raises in the second and third years.

However, a major reason for the rejection was the company's proposal for retirement after 35 years' employment. The union members are demanding it be reduced to 30 years.

Ken Hilderbrand, 52, has worked for Inco for 28 years and wants to retire after 30. At celebrations after the outcome of the vote was announced, he called the company's position "a penalty to the fellows who started young."

Bryce Pye, a 29-year veteran at 54, agreed and said he voted against the offer for that reason.

A member of the bargaining committee that recommended acceptance said he made his decision because "we thought we had a really good contract."

But Wayne Fraser was philosophical about the miners' refusal to go along with the committee.

"We've gone eight months now," he said. "What's a few more months? . . ."

However, Patterson didn't attend the Saturday night festivities.

"I had to be by myself," he said Sunday. "I've been up front for a week and taking it from all sides."

Lucien Bellefuille, 48, also skipped the celebration. The father of seven stayed home and worried about his financial difficulties. The bank has threatened to foreclose the mortgage on the house the family bought a year ago.

Ontario Reactor Working

DOUGLAS POINT, Ont. (CP) — The 800-megawatt unit one reactor at Bruce nuclear generating station has begun to produce power for the first time since it was shut down April 19, Gord Reaume, an Ontario Hydro spokesman said Sunday.

The reactor, one of four at the station, northwest of London on the shore of Lake Huron, was shut down last month when a fuel bundle jammed in one of 480 fuel channels during refuelling.

The fuel channel eventually was cleaned but suffered extensive damage and last week it was sealed off, restricting access to eight adjacent channels. Each capped channel reduces power output by between 0.2 per cent and 0.5 per cent, Reaume said.

During repairs, two workers were exposed to radiation higher than the recommended yearly dose, although neither suffered any immediate affects.

The start-up of unit one reactor was further delayed Thursday by a heavy water leak after a valve was inadvertently left open.

The unit three reactor, shut down March 30 for warranty inspection, is expected to resume operation next week.

Many Have Ulcers

PRISTINA, Yugoslavia (AP) — Two million Yugoslavs — almost one-tenth of the country's population — suffer from ulcers of the stomach and the intestine, said a report at a doctors' symposium.

Some Boating Back

WINNIPEG (CP) — Residents of St. Jean Baptiste in the Red River valley, forced from their homes by the flooding river, will soon receive permission to return. But for some the waiting is difficult.

"About 20 people have come back by boat and its pretty hard to weed them out," local Emergency Measures Organization (EMO) spokesman Eugene Landry said Sunday in a telephone interview.

It's expected the evacuation order covering St. Jean Baptiste will be lifted Wednesday. About 700 people were evacuated in late April from the dike-protected town and surrounding area, turned into a vast lake by the swollen river.

The return date for the nearby communities of Morris and Rosenort is Saturday and evacuees from St. Adolphe are scheduled to return Sunday, almost a month after the provincial government ordered a general evacuation of the valley.

Most people who left Emerson and Letellier are back as officials allowed them to return last week when water levels were considered safe. Some who live outside the protection of the dikes also returned.

About 7,000 residents of the valley — from Winnipeg south to the U.S. border — were evacuated after flood waters swamped farmland and threatened ring dikes surrounding towns and villages.

Landry said a crew of about 115 remains in St. Jean Baptiste to maintain essential services. Armed forces personnel, who helped to maintain the dike, have been reduced to 60 from 80 and will leave Thursday.

Water levels along the river continued to drop slowly Sunday with Emerson recording a decrease of almost 15 centimetres from Saturday's level.

An EMO Winnipeg spokesman, Nels Stavengord, said Sunday the organization is in a "hold position."

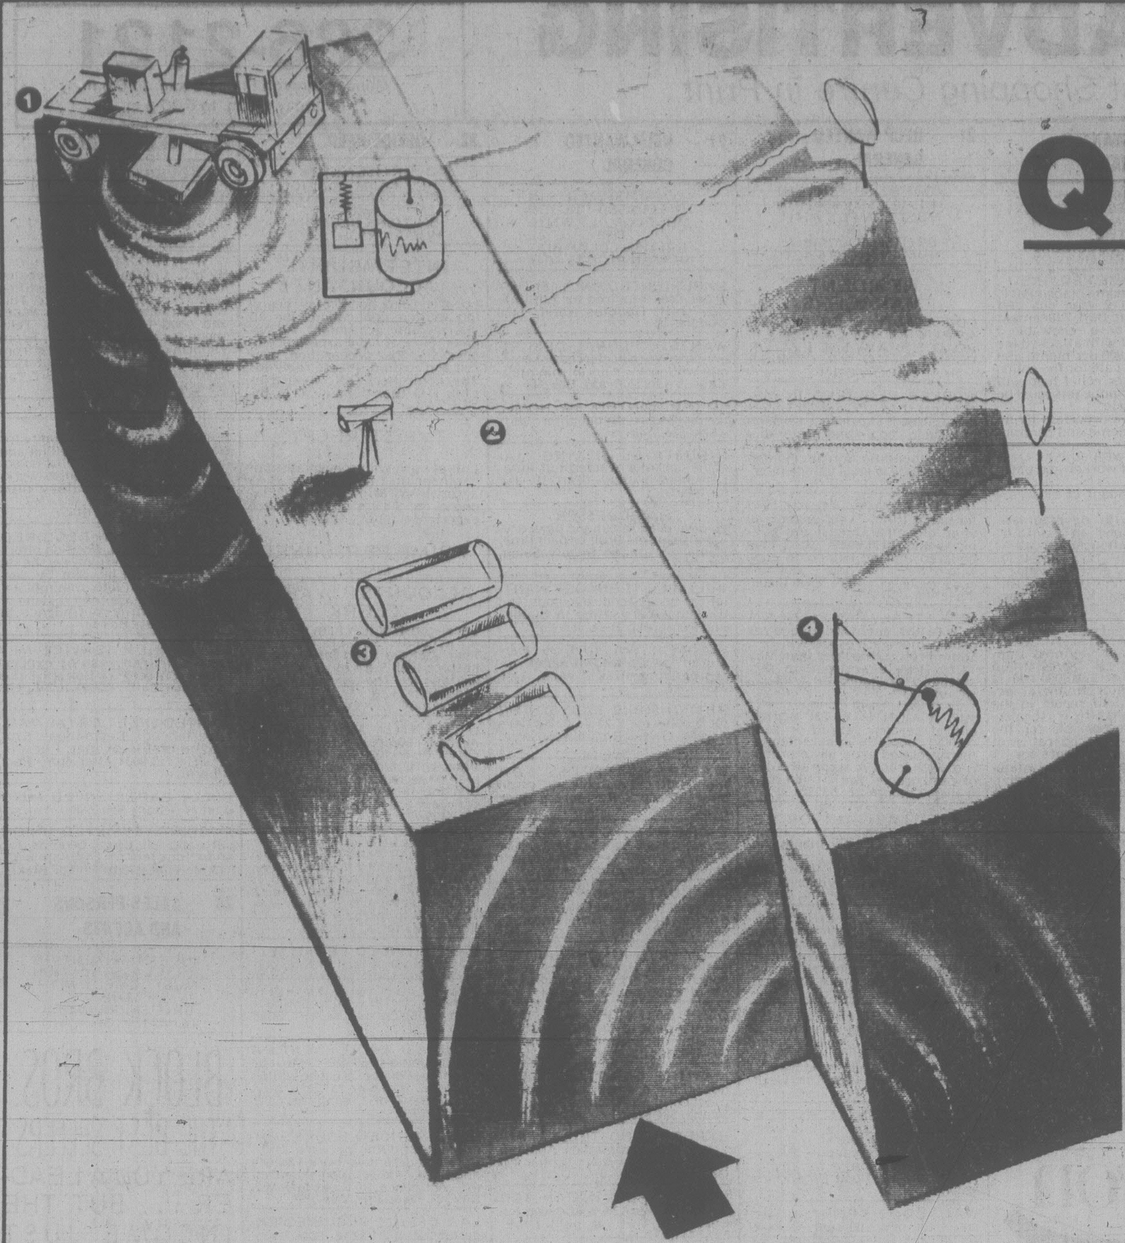
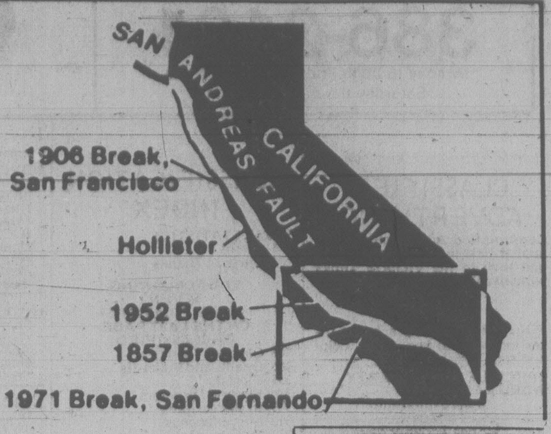
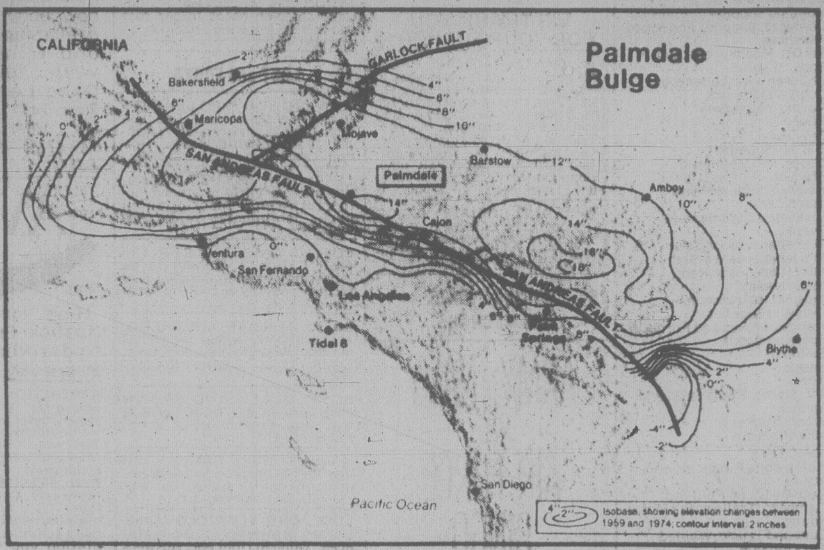
QUAKE!



The arrow at left indicates the northwest slide of the earth's plate along the San Andreas Fault. Scientists will drill into the fault in an attempt to understand the puzzling fact that heat and stress — which ordinarily would be expected in such a location — appear to be lacking. Mobile vibrator (1) is used to shake terrain and measure effect with seismograph. Laser (2) is used to record changes in the level of the land. Tiltmetres (3) act like giant carpenters' levels to detect any new tilt in the landscape. Standard seismograph (4) is used to measure shock waves from quarry blasts.





The area around the Palmdale Bulge in California is laced with fault lines.

Scientists Listening For Warning Sounds

By WALT SULLIVAN

NEW YORK (NYT) — The development of new measuring tools and improvements in older ones are enabling scientists in California to look at — and listen for — changes within the earth that warn of impending earthquakes. The stakes are high, for reliable predictions of time and place could save tens of thousands of lives when — not if — a major quake hits one of the larger cities.

The new tools include:

—Laser devices that can monitor a warping of the landscape by recording distance changes no greater than one-fiftieth of an inch in three miles.

—A drill that has already started boring into the San Andreas Fault. Most great California earthquakes have occurred along that north-south crack in the earth, including the one in 1906 that destroyed much of San Francisco. The hole will make possible for the first time observations deep within the fault.

—A mobile vibrator, recently developed for oil prospecting, that is shaking the terrain at a number of sites in an effort to detect an effect that has been observed in other parts of the world, a slowing of pressure wave velocities through a region where an earthquake is about to occur.

—Tiltmetres that, like giant carpenters' levels, can detect a change in the tilt of the landscape equivalent to lifting one end of a mile-long board a small fraction of an inch. Last week Dr. Barry Raleigh of the United States Geological Survey's earthquake research group at Menlow Park, Calif., said "very large" changes in regional tilt were recorded in August before two small quakes near Mount Hamilton. The changes, he said, were "really remarkable."

Along the most heavily instrumented sections of the San Andreas fault, devices to record changes in local magnetism of the earth that may precede a quake are located roughly every six miles. There is similar spacing of tiltmetres and creep metres, which indicate where one side of the fault is slipping relative to the other.

Near Hollister, the fault tends to creep, releasing strain that otherwise might accumulate until it causes a devastating earthquake. The sectors of the fault nearest San Francisco and Los Angeles appear locked, with no such gradual release of strain.

Movement along the fault is always in the same direction. The west side, dragged by the motion of the Pacific plate of the earth's rigid surface, slides northwest relative to the North American plate.

One puzzle is an apparent lack of heat or stress that might be expected where the sides of the fault slide against each other. It may be, however, that these effects are masked by overlying rubble and clay of the type known as gouge, which may be a by-product of fault movement and serve as a lubricant. Hence, the plan to drill more than a half-mile into the fault zone.

A drilling attempt in October hit natural gas at a depth of 1,200 feet, and the drill rig went up in flames. This time, a device to prevent such a blowout is being used.

The extent of stress within the deep rock can be determined by forcing water down the hole until the rock cracks. Using that method, it has been found — but not explained — that stress increases at greater distances from the fault, instead of the reverse.

Here and there along the fault, inverted plastic cups have been set in the soil to record any radon gas percolating up from below. In Asia, enhanced seepage from deep rock formations of this short-lived, radioactive gas has been found to precede earthquakes.

The hydraulic vibrator consists of a platform lowered from the truck carrying it until it jacks the truck into air, providing firm contact with the ground. It then sets the earth trembling at a succession of frequencies. The tremors are recorded at a network of stations, their travel times being determined by comparison with parallel signals sent by radio.

Russian scientists have found that, near their border with Afghanistan, pressure-wave velocities through the earth (from natural quakes and explosions) slow down before a quake, then return to normal just as the quake is about to occur. The same effect has been recorded in a region of small quakes centred on Blue mountain Lake in the Adirondacks.

According to Dr. Hiroo Kanamori of the California Institute of Technology and others, efforts to find this effect in California have so far been disappointing, although some believe it may have preceded the 1971 quake that took 64 lives and caused an estimted $1 billion in damage in San Fernando.

The occurrence on March 15 of two earthquakes near Palm Springs has led to hasty resurveying of the so-called Palmdale Bulge — a reported swelling of the landscape affecting an area larger than the state of Maine. For 250 miles it almost parallels the San Andreas Fault east of Los Angeles. The two quakes, both of moderate intensity (magnitude 5.7 and 5.2 on the Richter scale), occurred in the area of the bulge that, since 1960, is believed to have undergone the maximum uplift — almost 4.5 feet.

Such swelling of terrain has preceded severe quakes in the past, notably at Niigata, Japan, in 1961, at San Fernando in 1971 and at Haicheng, China, in 1975. The Palmdale area seems to have swelled early in the century, then subsided, yet no major quake occurred.

Nevertheless, the Palmdale Bulge includes at least two-thirds of the 175-mile zone where the ground was ruptured by the earthquake of 1857. This was one of the most violent quakes recorded since Europeans reached North America. The region then was sparsely inhabited but now skirts the eastern suburbs of Los Angeles.

One difficulty in assessing the bulge is that the high-precision techniques needed to measure its behavior are in their infancy. Attempts to repeat the measurements have suggested that the bulge subsided after 1974, but they have also raised doubts about the accuracy of the surveys.

Two types of survey have been done. One is leveling, in which standard surveying instruments are used to record angles above and below the horizontal on lines of sight between survey stations. The surveys are conducted in wide loops and, if accurate, the loop is closed. That is, on return to the starting point the ups and downs cancel out and the line meets itself. Some of the Palmdale loops, however, do not close.

In the other type of survey, laser pulses, like radar pulses, record changes in distance. The wave lengths of laser light being very short, changes of a small fraction of an inch can be detected, indicating whether the landscape in various directions is being squeezed or stretched.

In an observation hut on a hilltop overlooking Hollister, along the San Andreas Fault 135 miles southeast of San Francisco, Dr. Larry E. Slater of the University of Washington successively aims his laser through a series of ports facing nine summits in various directions. On each of them is a reflector that sends the pulses back to his geodolite recorder.

The observation lines are from two to six miles long, and measurements are made daily, either at night or in early morning when atmospheric conditions — which can radically alter the air's light-transmitting qualities and are difficult to correct for — are best. Slater sees a hint of compression to the north, along the easter flank of the fault.

21 HELP WANTED GENERAL

ADVERTISEMENTS IN THIS CLASSIFICATION MUST COMPLY WITH THE BRITISH COLUMBIA HUMAN RIGHTS ACT

Group Home Staff Needed
Three, experienced, mature staff are needed to operate an independent group home on a contractual basis for three, retarded children, aged nine to 12. These youngsters are currently living in an institution and attending community schools. They need the warmth and security of caring parent figures. They also need the structure and guidance necessary to develop personal life skills and appropriate social behaviours to enable them to function in the community. Since seizures and hyperactivity can be problems, staff should be prepared to deal with these. Staff should be familiar and comfortable with a variety of behaviour management techniques. They would be expected to work closely and effectively with the Ministry of Human Resources, other community resources and, with the social worker's help, the parents, in meeting the needs of these children. Some bookkeeping experience would also be useful. Please send resume including relevant experiences and references by May 15th to Doug Matheson, Ministry of Human Resources, 1627 Fort Street, Victoria, B.C. V8R 1H8. Phone: 598-5121.

CITY WATCHDOG RICHARDS Report #108. Congratulations to Aldermen McElroy and Blencoe for their endeavoring to have the Victoria Police Force increased by 10 men during a 1979 City Council Budget meeting held Tuesday morning. Your City's Watchdog believes that Community Policing is the answer to reducing the growing crime rate in Victoria and therefore disagrees with Mayor Young, Chairman of Victoria Police Board. Congratulations to the five members of the news media that were in attendance. Your City's Watchdog, who attended, understands that after their complaining of being excluded from 1978 Budget Meetings, the news media was conspicuous by their abscence during 1979 Budget Meetings until Tuesday's meeting. Congratulations to Lou Waibel and Egon Bauman of Douglas Volkswagen on their Tenth Anniversary, where Your Watchdog purchased and has received excellent service to his present 10 year old Volkswagen Van. If you wish information regarding City Matters please continue phoning 383-6259. Your City's Watchdog, C. Joe Richards or write PO Box 154. Seen In Passing: Paul Mantell, Manager, Michigan Street Branch of Victoria Public Savings Credit Union, assisting a Credit Union Member with a problem. POSTCRIPT: May 13th is Mother's Day, lets hope that sons and daughters Remember Mothers every Sunday.

TO ERNEST BLAGDON
TAKE NOTICE that a hearing will take place at the Provincial Court (Family Division) at 2020 Cameron Street, Victoria, British Columbia, on the 21st day of June, 1979, at 9:30 a.m. o'clock, to review the temporary wardship of the Superintendent of Child Welfare of your Children:
Dianne Kathleen Blagdon, 15.09.72; Lisa Marguerite Blagdon, 17.01.74. At this hearing the Superintendent will be recommending that the children be returned to their mother, Janice Nehring. For further information please contact Harry Kushner, Ministry of Human Resources at No. 3, 1318 Esquimalt Rd., Victoria, telephone 387-6381.

ARE YOU A STEP PARENT?

Is your partner the step parent of your children? Is there tension in your family because you have not all grown up together? Help is available for couples in which one or both partners are step parents. Call Faith Magwood, 598-5121. Ministry of Human Resources, Capital Region

A GOOD
CLASSIFIED ACTION
AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

DOWNTOWN RETAIL
Frustrated with a too small store — can't find retail space anywhere let alone at a reasonable price? Consider locating on a busy one way throughfare with a parkade a stones throw away and very close to Douglas St. Take as is or we will improve for the right tenant. 2700 to 5400 square feet and available right away. This kind of space at these rates may well not be available again in the downtown core.

SIMPLY CAN'T FIGURE

why this valuable home at 36 Sylvan Lane hasn't sold long ago. When I look at the gorgeous view, look at the seclusion of nearly ½ acre (assessed market value $64,950. land), look at the size of the house (approx. 2900 sq. ft.) and consider that at the asking price of $129,500. the house is going for about $23. per square foot. I realize all it needs is a little intelligent imagination and a vibrant family to instill life into its empty rooms. If you haven't seen this, or if you've seen it before, come and take a long hard look. Phone GEORGE BLACKBURN at 598-3321 right now.

THE EXECUTIVE TOUCH

is exhibited thru out this sparkling 3 bedroom home situated in popular Broadmead. Seclusion can be yours on the easy care lot adjoining an existing park. Cozy family room off the kitchen, eating area in kitchen, a sundeck, double car port and 2 and half bathrooms plus 4 pce. This is a one owner home and a real pleasure to show. Reasonably priced at $117,000. To view call MARJ NAPPER or MARKIE MUNN at 598-3321.

ESQUIMALT LAGOON
$66,900

Do you long to live close to the ocean, but always felt that it was beyond your means? Well here is a nice four bedroom home at a modest price. Within walking distance to the beach. The Vendor would like to move to Nanaimo and invites your inspection and offers. There is ensuite plumbing off the master bedroom and is roughed in for the third bathroom in the full high basement. A shake roof and a tudor exterior make this a very attractive home. BARBARA BOLLI 742-3042 or 598-3321.

I'VE COMPARED!!
HAVE YOU??

Values, that is. In addition to the accommodation provided, a condominiums' value is affected by the soundess of construction, the quality of finished work, the size and layout of rooms, the number and type of appliances, the standard of management and maintenance, the extra amenities like guest lounge, sauna, swirlpool and billiards and the location. In my opinion this lovely one bedroom unit with sweeping sea views of Straits and Olympics rates four-star. At $44,900. I recommend this as high value. There is much more to tell. Phone GEORGE BLACKBURN at 598-3321 anytime.

Sleep on dear good mother, it has been long years

Since you left our hearts filled with sadness and tears

Yours was a heart that was blithesome
and gay

Scattering sunshine all along the way

You know how we love you
love you yet

Though God took you from us,
we cannot forget.

World Owes U.S. $74B

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The world owes the United States nearly $74 billion, with the bulk from transactions, aid programs and loans made since World War II began.

The Soviet Union owes $1.1 billion and most of that — $674 million — is from lend-lease agreements the Russians won't pay until they get most-favored-nation treatment for trade from the United States.

The figures are contained in a recent State Department reference aid.

It shows that as of Sept. 30, 1978, debts owed to the United States, excluding those arising from World War I, were $45.7 billion.

The original debt from the 1914-1918 global war was $12.4 billion, a figure which by now — with interests — has risen to $28 billion.

The debts to the United States, from nations all around the globe, reflect transactions such as war material delivered to American allies in World War II; reconstruction efforts in post-World War II Europe; delivery of surplus food to developing nations; foreign aid loans; and Export-Import Bank loans to help and encourage American exports.

Not counting the World War I debt, about 54 per cent of the debt is owed by non-oil exporting countries; 25 per cent by Western industrial countries, 9 per cent by Israel, 7 per cent by members of the OPEC oil cartel, and about 5 per ent by the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe.

The largest individual debtors are Israel, India, the United Kingdom, Pakistan, South Korea and Brazil. Together, they owe the United States $18.4 billion.

Indonesia, Turkey, Egypt, the Soviet Union, Taiwan, Spain, and Chile each owe the United States over $1 billion.

The bulk of the $3.3 billion owed the United States by members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries is owed by Indonesia, the only OPEC nation still receiving U.S. economic aid.

Iran owes $37 million from two surplus property agreements signed in 1945 and 1948.

In the case of the $28 billion World War I debt, the debtor governments were not identified.

17th-Century Ship Found

By JOHN NOBLE WILFORD

NEW YORK (NYT) — A team of professional and amateur archeologists, participants in a round-the-world expedition known as Operation Drake, has discovered a sunken trading ship and other remains of an ill-fated 17th-century Scottish colony at Caledonia Bay on the Caribbean cost of Panama.

The ship, the Olive Branch, was found covered in mud at the bottom of Caledonia Bay, where she sank in 1699 on her way to supply the beleaguered colony. John Blashford-Snell, a lieutenant colonel in the British Royal Engineers and leader of the expedition, said here that the discovery as "extraordinary in that the ship was not only complete but complete with all its trading goods."

Excavations on shore unearthed the fortifications of Fort St. Andrew, which the Scottish colony built in 1698 and abandoned in 1700.

Mark Horton, a Cambridge University archeologist who directed the excavations, said he had "no doubt" that this was the site of the colony of New Caledonia. The archeologists found the moat and earthern ramparts of the fort, and inside they found countless pieces of Scottish pottery, clay pipes, weapons, trading beads and two coins, one showing the Scottish motto and dated 1695.

Operation Drake embarked from Plymouth, England, last October as a working tribute to Sir Francis Drake's marauding voyage around the world 400 years ago. The plan is to sail the 150-foot brigantine, The Eye of the Wind, around the world over a two-year period, conducting some oceanographic experiments and stopping at several islands and countries for more detailed explorations on land.

After Panama, where the expedition has been since December, the next stops are the Galapagos Islands, Fiji, Papua New Guinea, Sulawesi, Singapore, Chagos Islands and Port Sudan.

In addition to experienced explorers and scientists, the crews are composed of people between the ages of 17 and 24 from many countries. Twenty-four of the young explorers are rotated into the expedition every three months, their costs of $5,000 each borne by corporate sponsors.

Working out of a base camp at Caledonia Bay, about 150 miles south of Panama City, the expedition conducted studies of animal and plant life in a tropical rain forest and provided medical care to the Cuna Indians, but their primary mission was archeological. Old maps indicated the approximate site of the New Caledonia colony, and contemporary accounts told of many shipwrecks out in the bay.

The colony was a speculative venture organized by William Patterson, who later founded the Bank of England. Many Scots lost their money and their lives in the vain hope of establishing an overseas empire of their own to share in some of the trade wealth that was going primarily to their neighbors and enemies, the English. But the colonists were defeated by Spanish soldiers, malaria and yellow fever. Few of the original 1,200 colonists ever saw Scotland again.

In Operation Drake, a magnetometer survey of the bay near old Fort St. Andrew found a number of shipwreck sites. Royal Air Force divers and some of the young explorers then went down to one wreck, drilled holes in its well-preserved oak hull and extracted samples of its cargo. They found china still in packing barrels, more clay pipes (the colonists seemed to have been big smokers, possibly to chase off flies and mosquitoes) and the bones of salt pork.

Colonel Blashford-Snell said a comparison of the cargo with written accounts enabled the expedition's archeologists to identify the ship as the Olive Branch. The ship had come to grief one night when the cooper sneaked into the brandy storeroom for a secret nip. His candle ignited the brandy fumes and set fire to the ship, which probably sank quickly, putting out the fire and preserving most of the cargo.

Plant Holders Vary in Type

Large tin cans may substitute for more conventional plant containers on sundecks, patios and balconies. The cheapest kind of container may hold the most beautiful and perhaps unusual plant, so if cost is to be considered when planning container growing, look around for anything that will hold soil.

Woven baskets, discarded because of small damages, can be converted to plant containers by lining with a rather heavy plastic with a few holes punched in the bottom for drainage of water. Baskets are sometimes seen in used furniture or odds-and-ends stores quite cheap if they have a loose strand of fibre.

Plastic baskets such as those used for laundry and other househld chores, may also be lined with heavy plastic to hold soil. Put into a permanent place first and then filled, the laundry basket size would likely be useful for a couple or three years without the task of moving. Smaller plastic baskets as bun holders, cookie and nut holders, can be adapted.

Metal containers are durable and quite acceptable to plant roots as seen by the gradual disintegrating of the lower part and the bottom of cans when plants have remained in them for five years or more. Roots of most vigorous plants will be found adhering to the crumbled fragments of metal, extracting trace elements because of limited soil for root run.

The outside of cans may be painted if desired, but don't allow a trace of paint inside. Plants do not like paint, especially today's chemical types.

Wood containers can be put together from wood scraps and then stained, or painted with outdoor fence paint. Again, only paint on the outside.

One of the good things about containers is that they may be raised to balcony rail level on firm stands, or placed at foot level for a boundary mark around a raised deck not having a rail. And the containers may range from those holding a litre of soil to others holding 10 litres or more which will be too heavy to move.

Two important points to consider when growing plants in containers for outdoors are the texture of the soil and the provision for draining surplus moisture away from the root area of the plants.

Since the plants will be hardy outdoor kinds, the soil needs to be of rougher texture than used for fine-rooted house plants. It will need fibre to hold moisture and to allow air to enter.

At the bottom of large containers there should be a layers of one to three inches of rough stones, mixed with pieces of charcoal from wood burning to absorb toxic gases from stagnant water.

Watering requirements will differ with each container of a different size and a different material. Tin cans having drainage holes can be filled with water slowly and surplus will drain away.

Those of any material without drainage holes need less frequent watering and care in preventing saturated soil which will kill the plants. Plastic in constant full sun becomes very hot and this may cause a problem with some plant types. In shade, plastic will retain moisture longer because it is not porous; and there is no exchange of air or moisture with the outside environment except at soil surface.

The clue is to suit the plants to the containers and the situation, at the same time using the imagination to create the results you want for that outdoor living space.

Experts Endorse Two Ingredients for Dieters

WASHINGTON (AP) — A committee of experts retained by the U.S. government has concluded that two ingredients used in several commonly available, nonprescription diet aids actually do help people lose weight.

The experts suggested further tests to determine the usefulness of five other drug products sold as diet aids, and they rejected dozens of ingredients for which they could find no evidence of effectiveness.

The items rejected included a list of various food additives, herbs, vitamins, minerals and nutrients.

The committee report, a copy of which was obtained by The Associated Press, has been turned over to the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA), which ordered the study and must decide eventually what drugs, if any, are both safe and effective for weight control.

But the experts' findings represent a breakthrough for the makers of several brands of over-the-counter diet pills, candies and chewing gums that were found to reduce appetite. However, the committee was critical of some of the promotional claims made for such products.

One of the ingredients endorsed by the committee is phenylpropanolamine, which is also used as a nasal decongestant. The drug is similar to but safer than amphetamines, which are widely prescribed for weight reduction by some physicians but have come under increasing criticism in the medical community because they are subject to abuse.

The other drug that won the experts' approval is benzocaine, a mild anesthetic sometimes used in lozenges to treat sore throat pain. It is sold in candy and chewing gum form to dieters.

"One of the factors involved in hunger and satiety is taste," the committee report states. "Benzocaine is a topical anesthetic . . . which acts primarily on the nerve endings" and reduces a person's ability to detect different degrees of sweetness.

Reducing the sense of taste also seems to reduce the desire to eat, and the experts found the ingredient "safe for oral use as an anorexiant (appetite reducer)." The committee recommended between three and 15 milligrams in gums or candy just prior to eating as a safe and effective dose.

In discussing its findings regarding phenylpropanolamine, the committee said scientists do not understand how it or amphetamines work to help control weight. But data from several controlled studies were considered "sufficient to establish the effectiveness of phenylpropanolamine for weight reduction for time periods up to 12 weeks," the report said.

It added that a single dose of between 25 and 50 milligrams taken 30 minutes before meals with the total daily dose not exceeding 100 milligrams "is generally recognized as safe and effective for weight control."

A variety of diet aids now on the market contain one or more ingredients designed to produce bulk in the stomach and thus make a person feel full, even without eating. But after examining the available studies, the committee found the data "insufficient to demonstrate (their) effectiveness for use in weight control."

It suggested further studies to determine whether such products work. If they don't, the FDA is required to ban them.

The ingredients included in the category of bulk agents are alginic acid, methylcellulose, carboxymethylcellulose sodium, sodium bicarbonate (for use in combination with one of the other ingredients) and xanthan gum.

Fewer White Babies Die

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — The first South African race-mortality statistics to be published reveal that six times as many black and mixed-race babies die in infancy as do white babies. Writing in the South African Medical Journal, Drs. C. H. Wyndham and L. H. Irwig of the Medical Research Council reported infant deaths per 1,000 in 1968-71 were whites 21.6, Asians 36.4, blacks 123.9 and coloreds (mixed race) 132.6.

Church Leader Hit

MOSCOW (AP) — The imprisoned leader of the Soviet Seventh-day Adventist Church was attacked as a criminal and fascist by the government newspaper Izvestia in an article Saturday that also named two Western reporters.

Izvestia's main target was 83-year-old Vladimir Shelkov, the church leader sentenced in March to five years at hard labor for anti-Soviet slander following a trial in Tashkent.

The newspaper, an official organ of the Soviet government, said Shelkov's "agents were constantly in touch with some foreign journalists in Moscow," and listed Christopher Wren, former Moscow correspondent for the New York Times, and Kevin Ruane, Moscow correspondent for the British Broadcasting Corp.

It Wren received various publications about Soviet Adventists and Ruane was supplied with "information of a slanderous nature about the position of believers in the U.S.S.R. and so on."

The article added: "It was established during the trial that Shelkov and his supporters helped Western centres of psychological warfare operating under the cover of spurious concern 'for faith and religion.' "

It said religion "served for Shelkov just as a guise for his criminal acts."

"He exploited the religious feelings of believers although he himself didn't believe in anything," the article claimed. "Shelkov has only one idol — money."

Izvestia said police found $8,250 in cash and the equivalent of $402,000 in state bonds when they searched his house.

It also alleged that Shelkov "actively assisted the fascists" during the Second World War when the German army occupied the northern Caucasus.

Soviet dissident leader Andrei Sakharov sent an appeal to Pope John Paul on March 29 protesting what he called the "unlawful and monstrous" sentencing of Shelkov "because of his religious faith."

Shelkov has spent a total of 23 years in Soviet prisons and labor camps or internal exile.

Escapers Still Out

EDMONTON (CP) — Three recently escaped prisoners, two of them considered dangerous by RCMP, were still at large Sunday from the Fort Saskatchewan Correctional Institution.

Another, one of the 18 who have escaped from the provincial jail so far this year, was on his way back.

Brian Malcolm Black, 19, was arrested by Vancouver city police and charged with offences he is alleged to have committed while at large.

He was one of six prisoners who escaped the jail April 22 by climbing a ventilator shaft to a roof, descending a ladder to the grounds, running 45 metres to a 3.6-metre fence and scrambling to freedom.

Broadbent Buoyed By Toronto Stroll

ELECTION 79

TORONTO (CP) — For more than five hours Saturday New Democratic Party Leader Ed Broadbent walked through busy Toronto shopping areas, shaking hands with shoppers and answering their questions.

Accompanied by wife Lucille, daughter Christine and a number of prominent Toronto residents including Mayor John Sewell, Broadbent spoke personally to hundreds of Torontonians about their personal problems and what he wanted to do if he became prime minister after the May 22 general election.

In all he walked through six Toronto ridings, getting from one riding to another on an outdated tram car that itself drew attention to his electioneering.

At one point he took over controls of the tram car wearing the peaked cap of the driver and giving reporters and special guests a bumpy trip.

At times it appeared as a straight made-for-television day as the Broadbents strolled through such colorful areas as Kensington Gardens and other multi-cultural areas of Toronto.

Reporters groaned when one man asked why prices were lower in the independent markets--an obvious opportunity for Broadbent again to talk about his party's platform of introducing more competition in the food industry.

But he was greeted warmly by the shoppers, some surprised to see him in the flesh and others eager to tell of their support for him.

At one point a woman said it was her birthday. The result was three Broadbents, along with others, singing Happy Birthday To You at a busy intersection.

The walk also was a victory for organizers. Except for the leader showing up 15 minutes late at the start, the five-hour show billed as You can talk to Ed went off without a hitch.

Journalist June Callwood, former Olympic track star Bruce Kidd, artistic arts director Leon Major and CBC radio star Nancy White were among prominent Canadians strolling ahead of the Broadbent party and inviting shoppers to "say hello to Ed."

Ending the walk at a park in Greenwood riding, Broadbent told the gathering that his four days in Metro Toronto convinced him that the NDP would do very well there.

He said party polls showed "that the undecided vote is starting to break and to break in our favor."

Both Liberal and Tory voters were going over to the NDP, he said.

Arriving at Ottawa several hours later he was met by former NDP leader David Lewis, Ontario NDP leader Michael Cassidy, Ottawa Mayor Marion Dewar and others.

Grits First Choice In Poll on Unity

TORONTO (CP) — A Gallup poll says Canadians are divided on whether the Liberals or the Progressive Conservatives can deal best with the key economic issues of inflation and unemployment.

But the poll, commissioned by The Star, said that on the question of national unity, the thrust of Prime Minister Trudeau's campaign for re-election; the Liberals were strongly supported.

Interviewing for the survey was carried out May 3 through 5 in the homes of 2,000 eligible votes across the country.

On inflation, the Conservatives were slightly favored over the Liberals, 26 per cent to 24 per cent, with 14 per cent for the New Democratic Party. Three per cent favored the Social Credit party, 11 per cent answered that no party could do the job and 22 per cent said they weren't sure.

Trudeau's Constitution Threat 'Treasonable'

RIMOUSKI, Que. (CP) — Social Credit Leader Fabien Roy says Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau would be guilty of treason to Quebec if he patriates the constitution unilaterally following a country-wide referendum.

Speaking Sunday to several hundred supporters in this town about 300 kilometres northeast of Quebec City, Roy said Trudeau was irresponsible to suggest the Quebec government would oppose his patriation plan if the premiers failed to agree with him on a plan to bring the constitution from Britain.

"It is not just the Parti Quebecois government which is opposed to patriation but all the parties in Quebec's national assembly," Roy said.

"Mr. Trudeau will become guilty of treason if he ignores the common will of Quebecers, including Liberal leader Claude Ryan."

Earlier, at a $3-a-plate fund-raising breakfast attended by some 700 supporters in Montmagny, Que., about 60 kilometres northeast of Québec City, Roy attacked Liberal agricultural policies, which he said hurt Quebec.

He said the Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA) "largely favored the West by sending wheat and flour as aid."

Montreal Gazette Favors Trudeau

Times News Services

MONTREAL — Noting Canada's need "not just for a manager but a leader" the Montreal Gazette has declared its support for Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau's Liberal Party in the May 22 general election.

The Gazette, whose crosstown rival the Montreal Star earlier this week backed Progressive Conservative leader Joe Clark, criticized the Tory chief's platform on Canadian unity.

"Mr. Clark shows much promise of being able to grow, but when the existence of this country is at stake, Canadians should not be asked to elect a prime minister who must grow up on the job."

In the 1974 election The Gazette supported the Conservatives.

Meanwhile, Montreal's prestigious French-language paper, Le Devoir, has declined to endorse any party in the May 22 federal election, saying none of the party platforms or leaders deserves the confidence of Quebec voters this year.

Instead the paper advised its readers to look at the individual candidates in their ridings and "vote for the man."

"Grandpaw" Lloyd, "treasure-pot" Adam play in sand

. . . Valentines On Kitchen Wall

(Lloyd "Bus" Stern, has written a loving, caring story which the Victoria Times wishes to share with its readers. Born in Chicago, Stern was a high jumper at university and published a novel, Star's Road, based on his experiences in college sports. Stern and his wife owned a Memphis furniture store, which he sold after her death in 1973. He wrote this for the Washington Post from his home in Brookline, Mass.)

By LLOYD STERN

"Never live with your children," my wife of 40 years cautioned. When she died, I lived alone for a few years in the same house. It was never the same house.

If it was lonely in the early days, the evenings were worse — like the Sundays I suffered when, as a salesman, I had to spend them in a hotel on the road. Walking along in the hall past the children's bedrooms, I'd peek in sadly. The beds were made up neatly, unused and silent. The phone my daughters were once constantly on was mute, constantly off.

From time to time friendly real estate people rang my bell at odd hours. I sprang to life. I listened to their condolences.

I wasn't ready for this empty living, and I wasn't ready to sell my home. Not just yet. Wait, my son-in-law advised me. My son suggested a trip to get over this period.

A few months went by. My children were wonderful, so caring. Time would burn up the past. I took a 10-day trip through Norway, alone. I found out half my problem was the language barrier. The other half, when I couldn't distinguish between Bergen and Oslo, was me.

When I went back home I leased my house for a year, then drove by myself to Chicago to visit a lifelong friend. His wife had been dead a few years; he was living alone and, from what I could gather, wanted it that way. He told me his adjustment and transition had been a problem, and I had an opportunity to discover his manner of living. As a lawyer, he just plunged into his work. He lived mostly for his work — simple for him.

After a month with him in Chicago I decided to visit my brother and his wife in Los Angeles.

They had pleaded: Come out to stay! The visit was short; they had a 16-year-old daughter and a huge family dog. I loved their child, the dog hated me back. So much for living with friends and relatives. I flew back home after a week.

Eventually I would have to face the fact that I was lost, rudderless. I just wanted to get away from my home where I had lived for 24 years. It was lonely and too full of memories of my wife.

I had a try living by myself in Memphis and decided my unhappiness was that I was lonesome for my children, family life and their daily contact.

All three of my children were married, had families of their own. Two lived in Washington, D.C.; my oldest daughter, a teacher and writer, and her doctor husband lived in a 22-room house in Brookline, Mass., with one son, aged 7.

I visited with them. They had plenty of room and had leased out their third floor to two students. When the semester was up, both students left town and returned to their homes. My daughter suggested I lease their apartment.

"Never live with your children." I remembered my wife's words. I suggested that my daughter first talk it over with her husband. Only if he were happy with the idea would I move in; the plan appealed to me.

We decided to experiment for a six-month period. At the end of that time we could decide if we should continue the arrangement. I paid my rent for six months and moved in.

Living with my daughter, my son-in-law and my grandson, Adam, was something new, an experiment and a challenge. I had the entire top floor, and my own furniture, which I had shipped from Memphis, made it very comfortable. I was beginning to feel like my old self again. Respect and privacy helped, and since my daughter and son-in-law both worked, I had the advantage of using their home during the day.

Retired grandparents have lots of time, leisure to spare. I became available, anxious to be part of the family. I wanted to be home any evening for baby-sitting, happy with the thought of being close to a bright grandson. One flight down, he gave me many hours of pleasure. He came with the territory, visiting me while I was painting. He would share my acrylics, and we'd paint together.

Once, while I was helping him draw and paint, he said, "Pop, mother says you are a writer — how come you are painting?" I looked at my grandson, one of my first discoveries of my newfound happiness, and said, (I was so full of love for him at that moment, I hesitated): "I am a writer, but no one will buy or print my stuff; no one will read my stuff, my stories."

"Grandpaw," he said, "I'll read your stories." Oh, I thought, I hoped I could always enrich his life; he sure has been a treasure-pot for me.

That's how living close to my family has been. Once Adam came up for a visit to present a hand-crayoned Valentine, a red heart. Across the centre he had lettered, "Guess what day this is?" So you live all these 75 years and suddenly, like Alice in Wonderland, you're in a new world.

From time to time I heard him learning to whistle. When is the last time, or the first time, you have heard a kid whistle? It's happiness.

Forget the pains, the problems. There you are, sharing his pleasures. Listen to his questions. Grandchildren are loaded with questions. I have to be ready to discuss the Red Sox, because he says he wants to be a ballplayer when he grows up.

Folks at home can adjust where there is caring, loving. I have grown closer to my children, and I'm thankful I'm able to move about for myself. It's been almost four years since I moved in. I always think back to the lonely times I had trying to find how to live alone, the lonesome nights.

For really no reason, I decided (I hinted) one day that maybe after four years I might move. After all, Adam is almost 12, and, well, four years is a long time for a husband to be with an in-law.

Last year, four months ago, my daughter told me she and Terry, her husband, were thinking of having another child. At 35, if she was going to have another . . . well, would I stay if she got pregnant again? Such a delightful challenge — a request, if you will. Indeed, would I stay! A command performance.

How often does such an honor come your way? A lifetime proposition. After learning how to make a great after-school milkshake, I found out that today's diapers have done away with the safety pin.

What a pleasure to learn that living with children is learning again to live for them.

Up on my kitchen wall I have crayon drawings of flying first basemen, and Valentines reminding me what day it is (and no more lonely nights).

It's Grandfather's Day.

Further Oil Price Rise Predicted

NICOSIA, Cyprus (UPI) — Further rises in the price of oil during 1979 may be unavoidable, Kuwait's Minister of Oil Sheikh Ali Khalifa al-Sabah, said in an interview published today.

"With the market going as it is, I cannot see how further price increases can be avoided during the rest of this year," the Kuwaiti minister said in an exclusive interview with the Middle East Economic Survey.

"It seems to me that the present supply situation is still too tight to allow the consumers to build up their depleted crude oil inventories to any significant degree before the winter.

"The volume of exports by the OPEC-member countries is not running at the levels hoped for earlier in the year. This has led to something of a surge on the spot market where Iranian light, for example, is now fetching around $26 to $27 a barrel, which is some six dollars more than a few weeks ago."

Sheikh Ali pointed to a big dilemma for the consumers. On the one hand, he said, they can try to manage with an uncomfortably low level of stocks in an effort to keep the market as calm as possible. But if, on the other hand, they scramble for crude in order to replenish their inventories, they will inevitably push up prices still further.

Sheikh Ali conceded that the forecast higher price levels, together with measures by the consumer governments to curtail consumption and increase indigenous energy supplies, would at some stage result in in a slackening of demand for OPEC crude.

"Maybe next year," he said, "this will take effect and the market could ease to the point where supply and demand will be in balance with appropriate allowance for rebuilding of inventories, before moving on to a further period of shortage in 1981 or thereabouts."

Meanwhile in Vienna, the OPEC economic commission began meeting at its headquarters today. The session probably will last a week.

Gas-Dry Motorists Sweat and Swear

Automobiles coiled around the same block twice to get at active gas pumps while many fuming California motorists stood bumper-to-bumper in sweltering sun, convinced the odd-even allocation plan was doing little to shorten lines.

The state-imposed odd-even program begun last week so far has failed to unravel those lines at the gas pumps, and coping with the state's second fuel crisis in five years is taking its toll on the public mood and confidence.

Motorists are at the mercy of station owners, some of whom open fuel islands for only an hour a day.

The despair among Los Angeles County's 4.7 million drivers was reinforced during the weekend with longer lines, blistering 100-degree temperatures and an accusation that oil companies were deliberately holding back gas supplies.

"Evidence received during the past few days indicates that some oil companies are acting in a fashion that holds down supplies," California Air Resources Board Chairman Tom Quinn said.

"It certainly raises suspicions," said Quinn, who asked oil companies to explain their actions at a hearing Wednesday in Los Angeles.

Reaction in the long, snaking lines was predictable.

"Well, at least the politicians are waking up and finding out what the public has known all along," Hollywood resident Wes Franklin said. "The oil companies are just putting the squeeze on us so we won't complain when prices go up to a dollar a gallon."

California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. announced Sunday he is preparing emergency "stay open" requirements to keep at least half the gas stations open on weekends.

"The odd-even allocation plan depends on the availability of gasoline on a seven-day basis," the governor said.

Brown, hearing a suggestion by television commentator David Susskind that the allocation plan should already be called a fiasco, conceded it "is not a cure-all," but he said Susskind was "drawing an unduly negative picture."

With 93 percent of all stations closed Sunday, the "odds" have been unable to replenish their tanks since Friday. Many odds are nursing final drops of precious fuel until Tuesday.

Error Chops Edge Atlin Gave Calder

The correction of an error made in transmitting B.C. election results over the telephone in the riding of Atlin has substantially cut the NDP's victory margin.

Socred Frank Calder, the area's MLA since 1949, has now pulled within nine votes of Al Passarell who had been declared the winner.

Passarell was first given 818 votes to Calder's 694.

But an error occurred when figures were phoned in from Cassiar to the returning officer at Stewart.

Returning officer Norman Hamilton said today the poll worker in Cassiar apparently used the figure for the number of votes cast, including spoiled ballots, as the number of votes for the NDP candidate.

Passarell actually received 124 votes in Cassiar, not the 263 he was credited with election night.

That reduces the NDP margin from 124 to nine.

Hamilton said there was nothing wrong with the balloting; just human error when the figures were telephoned in.

Hamilton will count absentee ballots May 23 — the date of the final count.

Depending on those results, a recount is expected to be demanded by either Calder or Passarell.

Calder sat with the NDP until crossing the floor to join the Socreds just prior to the 1975 election.

The Social Credit Party won last Thursday's election with 31 seats to the NDP's 26.

100 Students Killed For Knocking Uniforms

PARIS (AP) — About 100 school children between the ages of eight and 16 were killed by soldiers in the Central African Empire after protesting rules requiring them to buy and wear uniforms, Amnesty International said today.

The Paris office of the human-rights organization said students in the Central African Empire have been demonstrating against the rules about uniforms since the first of the year. The students have thrown stones at many official cars, including that of Emperor Bokassa I.

Amnesty said that on April 18 soldiers of the Imperial Guard swept through homes in four areas of the capital of Bangui, rounded up the children and took them to the prison at Ngarangba.

BOKASSA
. . . freed some

The students were put in small cells sealed so tightly that about 20 of the children suffocated, Amnesty said. Some of the children were stoned by the guards to punish them for throwing stones at the imperial car. Some were stabbed with bayonets and others were beaten to death with clubs spiked with nails.

"Probably 100 children were killed and buried by the guards during the night in a common grave," Amnesty said. "One witness alone counted 62 bodies."

TV Debate Reviews Mixed

Times News Services

The national party leaders' debate Sunday drew a wide range of reviews from the public with many saying New Democratic Leader Ed Broadbent scored the most by dealing with issues.

Charles Templeton, a former Ontario Liberal leader who moderated a leader's debate in 1968, said "there is no question Broadbent won the debate — and no question Clark lost . . ."

(Other election stories page 44)

Undecided voter Bob Brown of Gander, Nfld. said he was most impressed with the NDP leader. "Clark talked twaddle, Trudeau talked history and Broadbent issues."

But Dr. Walter Young, chairman of the University of Victoria's political science faculty, said Progressive Conservative Leader Joe Clark generally appeared to gain the most. "He seemed to be more confident, more polished than I anticipated."

And Paul-Emile Richard, chief editorial writer for Moncton, N.B., L'Evangeline, said: "Trudeau was No. 1, Broadbent was second and poor old Clark was third."

A poll by the CTV television network after the debate found 32-per-cent of viewers thought Trudeau won while Clark and Broadbent were ranked first by 18 per cent each. The rest were undecided.

John Woods, a University of Calgary political analyst, said the average voter now will have to see Broadbent as the strongest man intellectually, in commitment and in character, but will still likely choose between Clark and Trudeau as a matter of course."

Most said the debate was the best of its kind but was unlikely to change many votes.

Bruce Blackadar, television reviewer for the Toronto Star, said there were no winners. The program showed that "no matter how angry the last couple of years have been, particularly as far as the media was concerned, when it comes to the crunch each man acted with civility and good manners."

And Charles McKenzie, national campaign co-ordinator for the fun-loving Rhinocerous Party, said the leaders "waltzed around the issues where it would have been more appropriate to break into a fox trot."

"Pierre Trudeau appeared to be operating on an overdose of ginseng, while Joe Clark gave the impression of man who has daydreams of a coalition government with the Rhinocerous Party and at the same time not really sure how he can explain it to his wife. Ed Broadbent looked like a rumor trying to get started."

Watson family home dates to 1903 and was once a North Sea fish boat

Sea-Strolling Family Back in Victoria Port

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

An aging 64-foot schooner, which began her seagoing career in 1903 as a North Sea fishing ketch, has arrived in Victoria after a journey that began June 10, 1978 in Denmark.

Aboard Providence were her owners, Peter and Barbara Watson, and their two children, Jada-Lee, 7, and her brother Adam, 5.

The Watson children could well be the modern version of Charles' Kingsleys "water babies". The Watsons have lived on boats for 12 years. As Mrs. Watson puts it, "They (the children) went straight aboard from the maternity ward."

The family left Victoria in the 40-foot ketch Rahnghild on the 1975 Labor Day weekend, wandering the oceans of the world in her until they reached San Diego on their way home.

There, they were offered a good deal on the ketch, one they couldn't refuse. Besides, Mrs. Watson had decided they needed a bigger "two-bedroom" boat. They sold her and for the first time in years were shore-stranded.

Then they heard of Providence and headed for Denmark.

When they first saw her at Fredickshavn she had no name, just a number. Until 1942 she had earned her living fishing under sail with no engine.

In 1942 she had been commandeered by the Danish navy and converted into a patrol boat. Her large hold for fish amidships was fitted out with eight berths and a large table for the naval crew. An engine was installed.

Watson, who earns the family's keep in between seagoing spells by fixing boats, saw that in spite of her age Providence, with her three-inch oak planking, still had plenty of seatime in her. The Watsons had found their two-bedroom home.

Watson decided to convert her from ketch to schooner rig.

Leaving Denmark, the Watsons first headed for Germany and then spent a leisurely three months on the Medway River in Britain before continuing their sea-strolling.

For easier sail-handling during the 27 days Providence took to cross the Atlantic Watson made a jury rig, relying mainly on one large sail.

"We set the sails and didn't adjust them for the whole trip," he says.

In spite of the fact Providence weighs around 50 tons, Watson says the jury rig allowed her to make good time, even under light winds.

The Watsons had left Jamaica six weeks before they arrived in Victoria, as an example, and the leg up from San Diego was done in seven days.

The Watsons made headlines in August, 1976, when it was reported they had been hassled by the Cuban coast guard when they put into Cuba.

Aboard Rahnghild's successor, Watson told the true story.

He and his family spent four days in Cuba, sailing into port with a huge Maple Leaf flying.

The crew of the gunboat, however, didn't recognize the flag but the Watsons were able to convince them they were Canadians.

At first the Cubans weren't too sure what to do. They left a young seaman, armed with a gun, to stand guard. When night came he became tired and decided to sleep.

"He didn't know what to do with the gun. I told him to give it to Barbara and she put it in the bunk," Watson recalls.

Contrary to the newspaper reports, Watson says the Cuban community couldn't do enough for them once they were accepted. During their entire stay shopkeepers supplied them with food and refused to take any money.

Mrs. Watson has acted as school teacher for the two children during their world wanderings. Now they will get theur first glimpse of a classroom.

Watson, who worked on the Robertson II before they set sail from Victoria in Rahnghild, will go back to working on other people's boats.

And, with the proverbial tender, loving care, Providence will be given a new lease on life.

UVic Gets $36 Million

The University of Victoria has been awarded more than $36 million in grants under allocations announced today by the Universities Council of B.C.

The University of B.C., however, is to recieve the biggest chunk of the $217 million set aside by the government this year for the province's three universities.

Under a formula worked out by the financial officers for the three institutions UVic is to recieve $36,871,075 while UBC gets $131,831,768 and Simon Fraser University gets $48,522,954.

Although UVic's grant is the smallest in total, on a comparative basis it is the second largest, with SFU getting the highest amount and UBC the least.

The funds include extra discretionary funds to be used by the universities in areas where unusual inflationary cost increases or declining value of the Canadian dollar have harmed university programs.

Awarded on the basis of the formula, those funds amount to $5.6 million for UBC, $2.1 million for Simon Fraser and $1.5 million for Victoria.

The awards also include $477,542 for new and developing programs at the universities and $1.05 million for

Mayor Raps Ratepayers Over Broadmead Planning

Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier said today Broadmead Ratepayers Association shouldn't interfere with the work of the Advisory Planning Commission.

"I hold the view they the APC should not be subjected to pressures and representations by neighborhood organizations," Couvelier said.

He was responding to a charge by the ratepayers association that a Saanich bylaw allowing the APC to discuss rezoning applications in private before they are examined by council contradicts the Municipal Act.

The procedure is unfair because the APC meets in camera and hears only one side of the issue, according to Bill Neilson, vice-chairman of the association.

Its recommendations carry "considerable weight" with council during the planning process, Neilson said.

Couvelier said the meetings are held in private so the APC can make its recommendations without being influenced by the politics of a decision.

Arguing the legality of APC discussions of rezoning issues is an "academic question that could be debated for months," Couvelier said.

He said council traditionally lets the APC submit its opinion about the land us of a piece of property before discussing an application.

"I'm damned annoyed at these suspicious types who labor under the delusion we are trying to hide things from the public."

According to Neilson, the ratepayers association believes the APC doesn't have legal right to handle rezoning issues unless they are handled first by council.

The APC is set to discuss Thursday a rezoning application by The Bay and Broadmead Farms Ltd. to build a large shopping complex on 35 acres of residentially-zoned land east of the Pat Bay Highway between Royal Oak Drive and Royal Oak Avenue.

Couvelier objected to the ratepayers suggestion all discussion on the development proposal be put off for at least a month.

"That kind of procrastination in my view should not happen at the bureaucratic level, it should happen at the political level," he said.

The ratepayers are calling for a municipal staff report on the retail shopping needs of the area for the next 20 years before a rezoning application for the proposed Broadmead Villiage shopping centre is considered.

Disclosure should include all professional staff evaluations of the project's impact on municipal services and the environment, says Neilson, a University of Victoria law teacher.

Abattoir Given Funding

A new abattoir in Greater Victoria is among a number of B.C. projects receiving more than $1.4 million in funds under the Agriculture and Rural Development Subsidiary Agreement (ARDSA).

Approval of the funding has been announced by Marcel Lessard, federal minister of the department of regional economic expansion (DREE) and provincial Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford. Both governments will share costs equally.

The abattoir is planned for the site previously occupied by Maplewood Meats. Victoria Farm Meat Services Ltd. of Metchosin will receive $46,425 under the ARDSA agreement. Total cost of the project is estimated at $158,700.

The abattoir will provide local producers with custom slaughter, cutting and meatwrapping facilities.

Owner Dwayne Nikkels plans to rennovate existing buildings and construct facilites to meet federal government guidelines for full meat inspection.

By qualifying for full federal meat inspection, the plant will create a larger market potential for its products. The annual potential livestock population on southern Vancouver Island is about 6,000 cattle, 2,000 pigs and 7,000 sheep.

Smith Picks Up Bawlf Projects

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Newly-elected Socred MLA Brian Smith said today he and fellow Socred Hugh Curtis rather than Victoria's two NDP MLAs will carry on the work started by defeated Deregulation Minister Sam Bawlf.

"It is difficult for opposition backbenchers to make an impact on government so I will make myself available as a spokesman for the concerns of the Victoria business community," said Smith, the new MLA for Oak Bay-Gordon Head.

He was commenting on a statement Saturday by Bawlf that his work of revitalizing the city, especially the Inner Harbor, is only half completed.

"We will continue to carry on the projects initiated by the vision of Sam Bawlf," Smith said.

Much of the work is already under way, Smith said, and there is no need to change direction.

While Victoria NDP MLAs Charles Barber and Gordon Hanson will be asked to submit their ideas, the planning and direction will come from himself and from Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis, the MLA for Saanich-The Islands.

Smith said it likely the government will invite Bawlf to act in an advisory capacity, although the direction would have to come from whoever is appointed to head the provincial capital commission, which directs planning for the downtown area.

Bawlf served as chairman of the commission and had a government mandate to beautify the city.

Much of his effort was centred on the Inner Harbor and the plans included parks, landscaping, a promenade and a convention-cultural centre.

Smith has been a commission member for the past six years as mayor of Oak Bay.

"Part of Bawlf's vision was that the Inner Harbor should be a place that people use and not just look at. During the next two or three years there will be great changes there and most of the planning has already been carried out."

The main task of the government will be to see the projects are completed as expeditiously as possible.

Along with Curtis, who was re-elected in Saanich—The Islands, he said he will convey to the government the concerns of the whole region, especially on matters of development.

High priority must be given to Bawlf's plan for a convention centre, Smith said.

"Unemployment is high in Victoria and this could help solve the problem. The economy of Quebec City was improved significantly by construction of a convention centre there.

"We can do the same thing in Victoria."

Work on restoring the Crystal Garden will go ahead and there should be a commitment by the government to renovate St. Ann's Academy for some useful community purpose. The annex has already been made available to the Conservatory of Music and this represents at least a partial commitment by the government that the property should be used by the community.

Smith said he expects to serve out his term as mayor.

He has been dividing his time between the mayorality and his law practice for the past six years.

"I don't expect I will be practising much law in the next few months but I feel a responsibility to complete the work I have been elected to do."

A session of the legislature could come as early as June and, if the load gets heavy, Smith would turn the direction of Oak Bay over to Ald. Doug Watts, the acting mayor, at least until the workload eased.

"I don't think anyone would appreciate it if I resigned as mayor and we had to have a municipal byelection on top of a provincial and federal election.

"Fortunately I have an experienced council that is working harmoniously and they should be able to carry on when I am away."

Smith said there are a number of municipal projects he would like to complete before his mayority term expires in mid-November. After that he would become a full-time MLA and would open a constituency office.

Grant Boost Official

Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm has instructed municipal governments to add the promised $100 increase in homeowner grants to this year's tax notices.

Councils had been holding off issuing the current tax forms until the ministry officially declared the promised increase.

By law tax forms must carry all information on provincial rebates before they can be sent out.

Duty Break For U.S. Visitors

Victoria's tourist industry got a boost today with the announcement that the U.S. customs office has increased the value of goods Americans can take home duty-free.

The new limits: Visitors staying less than 48 hours can take home $25 worth of goods each, up from $10. After 48 hours it becomes $300 per person, up from $100.

In addition, families can pool their duty-free exemptions.

This means a family of four can take home $1,200 worth of goods duty free, if they stay more than 48 hours.

"This is great news for our tourist industry," Victoria Chamber of Commerce manager Brian Small said.

"Now we must get merchants to spread the word. Many Americans will not be aware of this greatly increased exemption."

Information on the changes came from the U.S. customs office and was relayed to Victoria by the B.C. Steamship Co., which operates the Marguerite.

At Polling Station, She Has Last Word

WITH ONE ELECTION down and another to go, the process of getting out the vote does seem to be moving along very nicely. For this, credit neither some cloud-capped intellectual in Ottawa nor a battery of supercomputers. The honor goes to your neighbor, the woman next door.

She is a deputy returning officer — one of the not-too-many who responded when the call went out a few weeks ago.

While her commission lasts, which will be until the final vote is in, she's a sworn and deputized agent of the Crown. At the polling station on election day, what she says goes. She is organizer, adviser, arbiter and judge, and if you get out of line in her territory, she can appoint a special constable to arrest you quick as scat.

Her knowledge of voting procedure, acquired under forced draught, is well-nigh encyclopedic. To support her she has among the voluminous literature loaded upon her a formidable set of rules which cover virtually every contingency.

Then, plunk in the middle of the voting day rush-hour, a new problem presents itself.

Here's Mr. Butterfingers, traipsing back empty-handed from the voting booth, with anxiety written large on his honest face. Mr. B. has managed to lose his ballot. Between the DRO's desk and the voting booth, which consists of a government-supplied cardboard screen perched on a table, his folded ballot with the candidates' names on it has just plain disappeared.

Meanwhile, other voters continue to flood in, keeping the DRO and her poll clerk plentifully busy.

All ballots must be accounted for. To lose one is a serious matter.

While checking voters' names off her list, the DRO conducts an over-the-shoulder interrogation.

Could Mr. B. have dropped his ballot on the floor?

No, says he, and he didn't leave it in the booth, either.

Well then, would he mind looking in his pockets?

Not a hope, he assures the DRO. He's already gone through them.

Yes, but would he oblige by looking again?

Mr. B. does so. Out comes the crumpled ballot, to be displayed in triumph. He takes himself off to vote. Situation saved. Crisis over, and what will be the next one?

As the husband of a deputy returning officer, I stowed away at a recent briefing of the troops.

Into a room at Campbell River's Discovery Inn crowded about 40 women from points as far distant as Heriot Bay on Quadra Island, and Sayward 50 miles up the highway. The din was deafening.

Skulking in a corner by the coffee-making apparatus, I discovered another male.

"You a DRO?" I asked him.

"Hell, no!" he said. "I'm just here with my wife."

Three hours later, the exhaustive briefing was still going on. By this time I was thoroughly wilted, but Win and the other DROs seemed fresh as daisies.

"What about scrutineers?" one of the women asked. "How do I handle them?"

Answer: Scrutineers (agents of the candidates present to see that their interests are safeguarded) must remain back of the deputy returning officer's table. On no account may they touch a ballot, or converse with a person who yet has to vote.

"Yes," the questioner acknowledged anxiously, "but what do I do if a scrutineer gets out of line?"

The lady briefer drew herself up so that she seemed to stand taller. She looked rather like a picture of the British warrior queen, Boadicea.

"You are in charge," she said solemnly. "Remember, the authority is in your hands."

And there, with a salute to female efficiency, I suggest that it can be safely left. In fact, if it weren't for the women, I don't see how we'd get out the vote.

today's markets

Toronto

The Toronto stock market was mixed in light mid-afternoon trading today.

The TSE 300 index was up .88 to 1,459.23 but declines outnumbered advances 175 to 157 with 213 issues unchanged.

Among the 14 stock groups within the composite index, management companies led the eight gainers while real estate and construction led the six losers.

Volume of trading by 2 p.m. EDT was 1.84 million shares, compared with 2.17 million shares at the same time Friday.

Trading in shares of Husky Oil Ltd. was halted at the opening for dissemination of news that Alberta Gas Trunk Line Co. Ltd., which holds 49 per cent of Husky's shares, will acquire about 20 per cent of the shares held by the Neilson family at $48 a share.

New York

The stock market declined slightly in quiet trading today, still caught up in energy uncertainties.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 16.98 last week, lost another 1.64 to 828.92 by 2 p.m.

Losers held a small lead over gainers in the mid-afternoon count of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said investors remained fearful that gasoline supply problems could depress economic activity in a number of important industries.

But they also noted buying interest in stocks of companies that could stand to benefit from the situation.

Greyhound, for example, was up ⅛ to $14½ in active trading.

Another "hot" group was the grain-and alcohol-processing companies, thanks to speculation focusing on gasohol, an auto fuel produced by mixing gasoline with ethyl alcohol made from grain.

A. E. Staley Manufacturing rose ⅞ to $24¾; Publicker Industries climbed 1⅝ to $11.

Montreal

Prices slipped slightly in light noontime trading on the Montreal Stock Exchange today.

Volume was 75,436 shares traded, compared with 135,310 shares traded up to the same time Friday.

The composite index dipped 0.21 to 245.99, with industrials down 0.42 to 242.94, and banks 0.08 to 299.53. Papers edged up 0.59 to 160.03, and utilities 0.34 to 220.98.

Bank of Nova Scotia dropped ¼ at $22, Consumers Gas ⅛ at $21½, Gulf Oil Canada ½ at $45½, Inco ⅝ at $23⅛, Pancanadian Petroleum ¾ at $48, and Toronto Dominion Bank ⅛ at $22⅝.

London

The London stock market fell sharply near the close of light trading today.

The Financial Times index of 30 industrials closed at 525.4, off 8.4.

Stocks were generally lower but mining shares rallied.

Canadian stocks eased.

Syncrude Boost Planned

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta Energy Co. Ltd. (AEC) has told its shareholders that the company will likely exercise at least part of its option to increase equity in the Syncrude oil sands project.

AEC president David Mitchell says a decision on the option will be made near its expiry on Sept. 1.

OFF THE WAYS in Collingwood, Ont., is 654-foot, self-loading freighter, the Algroport, worth $30 million. Vessel has a deadweight carrying capacity of 31,200 tons and deck machinery is capable of unloading 3,500 tons of coal or 4,500 tons of stone an hour.

Paint Innovation

TORONTO (CP) — Flecto Coatings Ltd. of Vancouver has introduced some new paints and coatings with 20 times the normal penetration in wood and which also slows deterioration and inhibits warping and cracking. Called the envirosol system, the company described the new coatings at a Toronto news conference as the most "significant breakthrough in the specialty coatings industry in the last decade."
